VERDUGO GAS PROBLEM IS OUTLINED

Committee Presents City Council With Two Propositions

DECISION MONDAY

Plans Include Two Forms of Bond Issues to Be Voted

The committee from the Verdugo Canyon Improvement association, the aim of which is to secure gas service for that northeastern section, appeared before the city council last night. F. P. Newport, a large land owner in the canyon, was also present. Attorney W. E. Evans, representing the committee, explained to the council the situation with regard to the securing of gas for the valley as it stands at this time.

At the close of Mr. Evans' introductory talk, the meeting developed into a free-for-all, all parties interested taking a hand in the fire works. The very best of spirits prevailed, which makes it appear as though a successful conclusion will be reached at the next meeting of those interested, which is called for next Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The committee has two propositions before it for the securing of gas for its section.

The first is to vote bonds outright for laying the gas mains, this money to be refunded as connections are made at the rate of about $83 per consumer.

The second is to vote bonds to the amount necessary for the laying of the mains, which it is believed will be about $27,000. Of this amount $20,000 is to be paid to F. P. Newport for his water system and water rights. Upon receiving the water system the Verdugo canyon people will turn it over to the city free of charge.

The $20,000 received by Mr. Newport and the additional $7,000 will be turned over to the gas company for the extension of its lines into the canyon and the establishment of laterals. In return the gas company agrees to make refund to the district in the sum of $83 for every connection it makes in the canyon, this refund to be made at the time the connections are made. This would mean that eventually the residents in the district would get all of their money back.

In making his offer to the city council, Mr. Newport asks a number of things of the city in return, such as extension of laterals at city expense, etc., which the city does not feel at liberty to grant. It is to iron out these little difficulties that the meeting of the three interested factions will be held Monday night.

SECOND INTER-CITY MEETING APRIL 8

Los Angeles City club's second Inter-City Day will be held on April 8. The date is set for that day to give an opportunity to rather some specific recommendations for community work from the meeting of the Regional Planning Conference to be held in Long Beach on April 1.

A meeting of representatives from each city taking part in the Inter-City Day meetings has been called for tomorrow by Mr. Abbot to discuss a location for the meeting April 8. It is rumored that Glendale is being considered as the site. City Manager W. H. Reeves was asked to attend this conference tomorrow, but other business intervened. He delegated C. D. Gulick, transportation manager of the city of Glendale to represent this city.

SIERRA ASSOCIATION

The Sierra Avenue Improvement association postponed the meeting which was to have been held Thursday night, and no definite date has been set for the next meeting.

Youthful Writer Who Won O. Henry Prize

Edison Marshall of Medford, Ore., has been declared the winner of the annual O. Henry memorial prize of $500 for the best short story published in the United States during 1921. His prize-winning tale was "The Heart of Little Shikara," a story of India. The award was made by the Society of Arts and Sciences of New York.

Crime in Chicago Is Treated Tonight on Editorial Page

Crime in Chicago. The chief of police there confesses he is helpless. The city is at the edge of chaos. This is the tenor of an editorial in this paper this evening. It is one of several, all of which are worth reading.

In "The Listening Post" James W. Foley discusses the words of an eminently practical man who asked "What good is it?"

In the comment on the day's news Henry James speaks of the birthday anniversary of Grover Cleveland passing without public demonstration, of the prediction that men will fly from the Atlantic to the Pacific, of California's welcome to Herbert Hoover and other subjects fully as interesting.

Della Stewart and John Pilgrim contribute their usual features and Dr. Frank Crane writes on Fencing and Boxing. There is a world of information and interest to be found on the editorial page this evening. Read it.

U. S. CONSIDERS WAYS

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Ways of avoiding a coal mine tie-up on April 1 was one of the principal topics of discussion at the meeting today of President Harding and his cabinet, it was indicated. Attorney General Daugherty and Secretary of Labor Davis were expected to present suggestions for action by the executive. Action by the President probably would take the course of inviting the operators and mine representatives to a conference in Washington. Harding feels that a strike at this time would seriously interfere with the revival of business and is known to be anxious for a settlement of the controversy.

BROADWAY WIDENING ORDERED

Council Secures Deeds
Which Permit Work on Thoroughfare

V. B. STONE THANKED

Work of Many Months
Consummated When Deeds Turned in

Everything is now ready for the opening, widening and improving of Broadway from the present terminus of the improved section west to the San Fernando boulevard. At the meeting of the council last night deeds to a strip of property along the south side of this piece were received from the Los Angeles Trust company and the Edwards and Wiley company and 42 others, this being the final action on the part of the residents along that section of Broadway that is necessary before the city can go right ahead with the work.

For months and months interested parties have been working in an effort to secure the deed to this required strip of ground. Everyone realized that this unimproved portion of West Broadway was one of the real "blackeyes" of this city, it being the main western entrance to the heart of Glendale. And now that the required deeds have been received there is general rejoicing in the ranks of those who have looked forward to this improvement being completed.

V. B. Stone, who presented the deeds last night, was complimented by the board, on the earnest and successful effort he had put in in connection with the securing of these deeds.

BURGLAR FLEES FROM SHOTGUN OF CARPI

Hearing Noise, Glendale
Avenue Resident Fires
on Prowler

Thieves are working in Glendale again. Three robberies and one attempt at housebreaking were reported to the police department as occurring last night and this morning. Fred Dobrowski, 1601 South Brand, reported that his home was entered yesterday afternoon by a burglar who preferred women's clothing and jewelry. The burglar entered the house by climbing a stepladder to an upper window and removing the screen. The articles stolen were one short fur coat, one red dress not yet finished, one pongee dress, one blue taffeta dress, one grey dress unfinished, a camera, a wrist watch with the initials S. D. on the case and the legend S. Dobrowski on the inside of the case, three rings, two wedding rings with the initials S. D. and O. D. carved in them, one band ring with a small diamond set in it and a quantity of dress goods.

The Astra Film company on Verdugo road reported that their studio had been robbed last night and the thief secured three rifles. Nothing else had been missed at the time of making the report this morning.

Mrs. B. L. Smith told the police that she had parked her automobile at the corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway this morning while she did some shopping and that when she returned she found that thieves had taken a Smith & Wesson revolver and holster from the side pocket of her car. A shotgun fired through a front window by A. T. Carpi, 1611 South Glendale avenue, frightened away a man who was last night trying to break into the Carpi home. Mr. Carpi told the police that the man first tried to enter the house through a side window. Failing in this he next tried a door. It was then that Mr. Carpi raised the front window and fired the gun. He said that he saw a man with a long overcoat cross the street in a hurry immediately after the shots were fired.

CHIEF FRASER DETECTS

As a detective, Chief of Police Fraser is good. While Glendaleans were wondering who fired the volley of revolver shots on Wednesday night near Glendale avenue, the chief went out and solved the mystery.

It appears from the chief's investigation that a party of picnickers were passing through the town and in a spirit of revelry fired a salute of blank cartridges from revolvers.

Register For Bond Vote

Seeking the full expression of all the citizens of the Glendale Union High School district upon the $600,000 bond issue, the Board of Trustees has set May 2 for holding the election.

The last date to register is April 1. Unless the taxpayer is registered he cannot vote for or against the bond issue.

A serious situation has arisen this year. With the date for the close of the registration for the primary and subsequent election drawing near, there is still 40 per cent of the total Glendale voters who have not registered.

This 40 per cent undoubtedly have individual opinions worthy of expressing.

They may be for or against the bond issue. The vote of these people is in a sense the community property of Glendale, wrongfully withheld now, at a time when the entire community is involved in consideration of the expenditure of $600,000.

It is not enough that these voters are not against the bond issue or that they are not for it and so declined to vote. The community has a right to demand that they express themselves now.

To express themselves they must register. Already for the benefit of the whole of the community, the calling of the election has been delayed to the last day possible to secure their vote. Thirty days after April 1 the election will be held, which means that thirty days after the last possible date for them to register the high school district will pick up the thread of progress again in order to rush the school, if voted, to completion to head off the congestion of 1923. There is not an hour to spare to save the situation.

BONUS BILL IS SHUNTED INTO SENATE

330 to 70 Vote in House for Measure and Send it Through

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The soldiers' bonus bill, shunted to the senate after a triumphant 333 to 70 passage in the house, must have action in the upper body or democrats will try embarrassing tactics against the republicans.

Arrival of the bill in the senate will be the signal for starting action. The republicans will be asked "pertinent questions" by Senator Harrison, Mississippi, democrat.

Harrison's questions will be:
1. Is this bill to lie smothered in committee until next year?
2. Does the committee honestly intend to get action or will there be only camouflage?

Harrison wishes either to compel action at this session or give the democrats campaign material on which to accuse the republicans of delay and insincerity. The bill has now become a rather non-partisan measure.

Chairman McCumber of the finance committee insists the senate will pass the bill without radical alterations.

GLENDALE GUARDS BREAK ROUTINE

Sergeant Welch of Wild
West Division Instructs in Interior Duty

The two Glendale companies of the California National Guard, company M, commanded by Captain Thomas D. Watson, and Headquarters company, commanded by First Lieutenant Normal C. Hayhurst, deviated from the usual routine of drill last night and under the direction of Second Lieutenant Harold L. Alexander of company M were given a series of setting up exercises, or physical drill. After the physical drill the men were instructed in interior guard duty by instruction Sergeant Welch of the regular army. During the war Sergeant Welch was a captain commanding a company of the 35th Infantry, a unit in the 91st division, known as the "Wild West Division."

After a brief lecture on the duties of the sentinels and non-commissioned officers of the guard while on duty, two squads under the leadership of Corporals Stone and Fry were designated as the guard. The first relief was posted under the direction of the drill field with instructions and special orders. The second relief was then taken out and the guard relieved.

The second non-commissioned officers' school was held before the beginning of the drill period. This school is directed by Second Lieutenant Alexander and is held to instruct the non-commissioned officers of company M in their various duties.

BIG BOND ELECTION ON MAY 2

Trustees Allow One Week for Delinquent Voters to Enroll

REGISTER BY APRIL 1

Alarming Decrease in Enrollment Halts Plans to Rush Election

The $600,000 bond issue for the new high school will be voted upon May 2, it was determined yesterday by the board of trustees.

The last day to register in order to vote on the issue is April 1.

Only qualified voters who have registered can vote on the high school bonds.

Polling places for the casting of votes will be announced later. There will be three in Glendale.

Before fixing the date of May 2, the board checked up the total registration to date from the Glendale district.

Deputy Registrar L. W. Ball reported that the registration showed a shortage of the normal vote amounting to 40 per cent.

While the election might have been called now for thirty days hence, it was decided to delay and allow one week to permit delinquents to register so that they might express themselves on the issue.

HIGH P. T. A. TO FINANCE BAND FOR STUDENTS

Record of 532 Members
Achieved for Assn.
Bring Reward

It will be remembered that some time ago the Parent-Teacher Association of Glendale High proposed to finance an instructor for a high school band provided the school would get busy and secure a P. T. A. enrollment among the parents of students of 100 per cent.

The proposition was received with enthusiasm and six roll rooms made good. Two of the six are roll rooms 308 and 129. The other roll rooms are under the following teachers: Miss Mohr, George Lockwood, Mrs. Dora Gibson and Miss Knight.

The association now has a membership of 532 and feeling that the good work deserves recompense even though the full 100 per cent has not been attained, the organization has decided to finance the project anyway, which has been approved by the board of trustees. The teacher will be employed to give instruction to the boys who enroll for such a band during the seventh, eighth and ninth periods for the balance of the year and he will teach music as well as lead.

Mrs. Dora Gibson, head of the music department, is confident a band of 40 players can be organized. Just who the instructor will be has not been determined, but there is a possibility that Mr. Mulford, who developed the fine Catalina band and who is doing such splendid work at Lincoln High, may be engaged. He is regarded by many as the finest director in that line in Southern California.

The school is jubilant over the prospect and members of the P. T. A. are equally pleased. Mrs. Elliott Wyman, the president, having worked hard to bring it about.

HOOVER CANCELS DATES

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., March 24.—(United Press)—Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover today cancelled all engagements in San Francisco and remained at his home here, on account of the tragic death yesterday of six-year-old Walter Large, his nephew. The child was found drowned in the swimming pool at the Hoover home. Hoover was deeply affected. The secretary will leave for Denver Saturday night.

BRITISH LOCKOUT

LONDON, March 24.—(United Press)—Forty-seven labor unions, comprising more than 600,000 workers affiliated with the engineers now locked out, have voted overwhelmingly to reject the employers' terms. It was announced today. The engineering lockout probably will be extended as a result of this, to include a million workers.

Safe and Sane Fourth of July Is City's Decree

Here's bad news for the kids.

Glendale will have a safe and sane Fourth of July. At the meeting of the council last night Councilman Kimlin moved the city attorney be instructed to draft a resolution that will prohibit the sale of fireworks in the city of Glendale. This motion was seconded by Councilman Lapham and unanimously adopted.

The fire crackers of other days will have to be supplanted by slap sticks and the roman candle of yesterday by candy and peanuts, while the arnica of the aftermath will come in the comforting form of ice cream and vasoline.

Fortunately the family auto is in good working order these days in Glendale, and those that positively must play with fire have the open country to play in. Although, when out in the open hills look out for the forestry man, for he is sure one bear cat on fire and fireworks. And his words are short and potent.

ZARH IS DENIED TIME ON SEWER CONTRACT

Opposes Application for Extension Until Claims
Are Satisfied

B. D. Zarh applied to the council last night for an extension of time in his contract with the city for the construction of the business district sewer on the alley west of Brand boulevard and north of Broadway.

City Manager Reeves reported that this contractor caused the city considerable trouble in one way or another and that there was absolutely no reason why this work was not finished. He has been arrested on one or two occasions for violations of different laws. He recommended that this extension of time be not granted until Mr. Zarh pay to the city and property owners immediately adjoining his work the claims they have against him. Action to this effect was taken by the council.

LOS ANGELES, March 24.—Following the dismissal of Captain of Police W. L. Spellman, commander of the central division and Lieut. A. W. Gifford, head of the vice squad, Chief of Police Everington who lives in Glendale, today issued a stinging criticism of certain members of his department personnel and indicated his intention of "taking to the war path."

NEW HIGH SCHOOL SITE IS DELAYED

County Supt. Koepfel Outlines Law for Trustees

POSSIBILITY IN FALL

Board Forbidden to Purchase Another Site
Until Next Year

A site in the northwest section of Glendale for the high school of the future may be selected and secured by the next school year, the board of trustees of the high school announced yesterday, on the authority of County Superintendent of Schools Mark Koepfel. Until the next school year, beginning in September, the board, according to the superintendent, is barred from purchasing a site anywhere in the district.

After the beginning of the new school year, in the fall, it will be within the power of the trustees, if authorized by voters, to again make a selection of a site for the erection of a school plant to supplement the high school system of the city. The site so secured would probably not be used for several years but it would be possible to anticipate the growth of the school population and city land values by the securing of an additional site.

The action of the trustees followed the instruction of the late mass meeting which issued the instructions to the trustees to proceed with the calling of the bond issue for the new high school as planned.

These instructions were to the effect that the board investigate the possibility of securing the twenty-acre Gardner tract on the north-west side of the city for a site to be used when the new plant now under consideration was outgrown.

Principal George U. Moyle, H. W. Yarik and Thomas D. Watson, visited Superintendent Koepfel on Thursday and laid the wishes of the mass meeting before him and asked assistance in arranging some method of acting on the proposed site on the west side.

Supt. Koepfel advised the committee that this could not be done legally at this time.

Legally, he said, bonds could be voted only up to the limit of the bonding capacity which in Glendale is now $608,000. Six hundred thousand dollars of this would be tied up if the citizens vote for the new high school on the present site already secured.

The superintendent strongly advised the committee that it would be against all school law to pur-

WILLYS-KNIGHT TALKING CAR ARRIVES HERE

Fred Lawton From Factory Demonstrates Before Auto Class

Fred Lawton, who is touring the state and is lecturing in the interest of the Willys-Knight factory in Toledo, Ohio, delivered a very instructive and interesting lecture before the automobile machine shop and science classes of the Glendale high school, this morning at 8:15 o'clock. About sixty boys were present.

In these lectures Mr. Lawton takes his hearers back to the adoption of the Knight motor in 1903 by the Daimler company, one of the largest automobile manufacturing concerns in Europe.

He explains the improvements made to and general advancement of the Knight motor up to the present time. Also, he tells how the Knight motor differs from any other type of motor on the market today. He says that the only reason that the Knight motor is not manufactured by other motor car makes is that the agreement states that not more than five concerns can manufacture this motor in the United States.

Mr. Lawton has with his working models of the Knight motor, the minute details of which are explained in a very clear and concise manner. He was sent here by the factory at the request of Mr. Geo. T. Smith, 228 South Brand boulevard, Overland and Willys-Knight agent in Glendale.

The citizens of Glendale are to be treated to a novel form of entertainment, according to Mr. Smith. He says that on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights he has arranged to have appear on the streets in various down town sections of Glendale, a Willys-Knight car that literally talks for itself. According to Mr. Smith, the motor of this car runs so smoothly and silently it has been equipped with a glass hood, exposing the working parts of the motor, to prove that it is really running.

The "Talking Knight" as it is called will address passersby, calling them by their names or identifying them by some distinctive part of their appearance. Some of the fair sex may be delightfully surprised to be told by an automobile how becoming are their new hats or spring furs.

We have all heard of automobiles being improved until they can be run by children, just as the advertisements of a popular washing machine tell us it "can be run by a child," but we have never before heard of an automobile being taught to speak for itself.

Considerable mystery surrounds this "Talking Knight" and Mr. Smith says he is baffled by it himself. He has offered a prize of $1000 to anyone proving the 'stunt' is done by means of a phonograph. However, the factory has assured him he can teach any car to talk in a similar manner for a small cost.

J. C. S. SPEAKER

This morning the girls of Glendale High had an assembly at which they were addressed by Major William D. Morgan of Washington, D. C., lecturer of the International Correspondence School.

He urged the girls to get all the education possible before going out into the business and professional world, citing many instances of young women forced to live from hand to mouth because they were so ill prepared that they could not command good salaries.

He also appealed to the girls to stand for all that is truest and best in life for the sake of the manhood of America if not for their own.

WOMEN'S SKIRTS STEADILY MOVE DOWNWARD

Paris Dictates Are Being Obeyed by Even the Flapper

NEW YORK, March 24.—Inch by inch women are yielding to the verdict of the long skirt. When Paris first decreed the long skirt, American women stubbornly refused to lengthen their hems, but designers shrewdly brought out the long panel as a "coup de resistance." If we are looking for a place to cast the blame of the long hem, we can "pan" the panel.

Over two hundred American buyers and manufacturers arrived recently from Paris, returning from the latest Paris openings, and the only real style revolution which they brought is the long skirt. Evening gowns must be long if the lady wishes to continue in fashion's whirl. Suits and day time frocks will be short, but not so short as we have been wearing. Ten inches from the floor seems to be the standard length. The knee length hem is passe.

Silhouettes are so varied this season that she who fancies herself in bouffant frills can be as ruffy in peacock-edged hip ruffles and wide skirts as a full blown chrysanthemum and she who fancies the long, straight lines can panel herself into a string-bean effect.

Waist lines are long. A new treatment of the long waist is achieved on the draped gown which hangs loose to the low waist and then is drawn tightly across the front and back and caught in gathers on the hips. A long draped side panel usually accompanies a gown of this type.

The bateau neckline predominates in Paris, although a few low V-shaped necks appear on some of the dressy frocks.

Sleeves are the most striking note in the season's costume. They are long and extremely wide and bell-shaped for day wear and the evening gowns have sleeves that are short and balloon shaped or are entirely sleeveless.

The three piece suit is even proving to be more popular than the fore-runners of fashion predicted. Nearly every gown for the coming season has a jacket or short cape to match without which it would be as forlorn an object as the proverbial stepchild. Short leather jackets made in red, green, and white are being sponsored by the smart Parisians.

The latest hosiery color in Paris is a shade somewhat darker than onion peel. It is worn with patent leather slippers which display huge bejeweled and glittering buckles. These buckles, by the way, are one of the newest Paris fashion wrinkles. This dressing up of the foot is probably due to the fact that sheer hose—the former pedal attraction—is hidden under the longer skirts.

Parisian Make-Up
Make-up to the average American woman means powder, rouge and an eye-brow pencil. The Parisians are more fantastic and venturesome in their usage of make-up. Several seasons ago they adopted the sunburn make-up, with no coloring in the cheeks and a vivid splotch of red on the lips. Now they are going back to the pink and white coloring, but are affecting reddened eyelids, a peculiar fancy which gives them the appearance of having had a hard weeping spell.

Painted Heels
"The heel on the ballroom floor," is causing quite a thrill at smart Parisian functions of late. Women have taken up a fad of wearing their favorite fetish hand painted on their ballroom slippers. White elephants, buddas, turtles, etc., are painted in colors on the high French heels. In some instances the favorite pet is painted in color and one sees vivid hued parrots on black patent leather footgear.

Trotzky Trotteur
Although we have not accepted the Russian idea of politics we seem to relish everything else they present, from caviare to literature and now, along with the Russian boots and embroideries, we have the Trotzky Trotteur. It is made of simple sack cloth resembling gunny sacking in color and texture and has a monklike coat with a bateau shaped neck which slips on over the head. To the bateau neck is attached a wide rolling horse collar which is worked in Russian cross-stitch design in red, orange and green fute. The long sleeves are extremely wide and completely covered with the colored cross-stitching. The skirt is narrow and self-fringed at the bottom.

SANTA FE LINE OPEN
AZUSA, Calif., March 24.—(United Press)—The Santa Fe main line was being re-opened here today following yesterday's disastrous wreck with the Phoenix flyer, Los Angeles bound, making 65 miles an hour, struck a steam roller. Engineer Ollie A. Bryson and Fireman Charles N. Hughes were instantly killed.

"Yes," said the principal of the young ladies' school to the proud parent. "You ought to be proud to be the father of such a large family, all the members of which appear to be devoted to one another."

"Large family. Devoted?" gasped the old man in amazement. "What on earth do you mean?"

"Why, yes, indeed," said the principal, beaming through her glasses, "no fewer than eleven of Dora's brothers have been here to take her on the river, and she tells me she expects the tall one with the blue eyes again tomorrow."

BUSINESS CLUB IS NEW CITY ORGANIZATION

Upbuilding of Glendale
Is the Purpose of
New Unit

Glendale is fast acquiring a variety of organizations likely to contribute to the up-building of the "fastest growing city in the United States," and one of the latest in sight is the "Glendale Progressive Business Club" which is to be organized at a "stag smoker" to be held at the chamber of commerce, March 30, at 8 p. m.

A large number of business and professional men of the city have been invited to be guests and enroll as members.

The invitation stated that the meeting will be in charge of District Governor J. Frank Glendon of Los Angeles, supported by other district officials and by prominent business and professional men who are members of Progressive business clubs of Los Angeles, Long Beach and other cities of Southern California. These men will explain what a progressive business club means and what it can do for a city. Glendale business men acquainted with the purpose of these clubs as worked out elsewhere have expressed interest in the project and a disposition to push it along as a good thing.

La Crescenta

LA CRESCENTA, March 24.—The drama section of the La Crescenta Women's club met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Chas. Turk at the La Crescenta hotel. The most enjoyable feature of the afternoon was the resume of John Drinkwater's play, "Abraham Lincoln," by the curator, Mrs. Turk. The section will take up the study of this play at the next meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Thomas are lamenting the fact that they will have to be away from home for two months. They are leaving early in April for New York, where Mr. Thomas goes to paint the portraits of a number of distinguished men. As Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have a number of friends in New York and Washington whom they have met in all parts of the world, they will no doubt have a delightful social time.

A survey of Montrose and La Crescenta is now being made for gas. The work of laying the mains will follow, and it is expected connections can be made early next year.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Brown of Los Angeles avenue were hosts to a group of friends at dinner last Tuesday evening. The guests included Mrs. G. J. Smith of Los Angeles, Mrs. George Withell of Montreal, Canada, and Thomas Yapp, of St. Paul, Minn.

Frank B. Turner, formerly with Collins and Tillinghast, has opened an office in Montrose on Honolulu and Ocean View avenues, where he is now doing a real estate and insurance business.

CITY PURCHASE OF LIGHT CONTROL UNDER WAY

Plans to Buy Electric System in Annexed Part of Burbank

Glendale is about to purchase a portion of the electric system of Burbank for $2,421.98. This is situated in the territory that was annexed to Glendale at the last annexation election. The matter came up before the council last night and the matter was turned over to the city attorney in conjunction with the superintendent of plant and production. There is no doubt that this electrical equipment will be purchased, however, as the purchase has already been recommended by Mr. Deiderich. The reason for holding the matter over was to give the city attorney a chance to see if the proceedings were correct as to form. The inventory of the distributing lines that will be purchased is as follows:

San Fernando North of Raymond	604.33
Highway Lumber Co.	94.19
Thurber Place, North of Eleventh street	171.05
Tenth street	121.30
Alameda, north of Sixth	421.61
Sherlock drive	258.89
Watson Court	331.49
Eleventh street, west of Thurber	428.12

Total $2,421.98

With regard to the purchase of this system Manager Deiderich submitted the following letter to the city council:

"I am submitting herewith invoice of the electrical distributing system of the City of Burbank in the district recently annexed to the City of Glendale, known as the Laurel Avenue district.

"The values have been agreed upon by myself and Mr. Hill of the City of Burbank and he has forwarded a bill of $2,421.98, according to the values set out in the inventory of these lines. These lines are in good condition and the values agreed upon are less than same could be duplicated for at the present time, and same can be used in giving immediate electrical service in this district.

"I would therefore recommend that the system be purchased from the money available in the electric light budget fund."

Youth is always an extremist. Some naval officers were discussing in their mess the great battle-ship question.

The more sober, middle-aged men were inclined to think that the value of the battleship had been impaired by the vogue of the submarine.

"What is the value of the battleship today?" asked one gray-haired senior officer.

"No value at all," boldly asserted the youngest member of the mess.

But even that impulsive youth thought he had gone too far, for he added:

"Of course she's got a very nice deck for dancing."

LOMITA AVE. SET BACK LINE CHANGED

Permit Allows for Erection of New Apartment House by Builders

At the session of the council last night the setback line on the north side of Elk street between Brand boulevard and Louise street was changed from 25 to 10 feet. This was done on the request of A. G. Smith and F. D. Marshall. Mr. Smith has already put in the foundation for the apartment house that he intends building on Elk street just west of the new Catholic church. It is expected that this structure will be modern in every way and will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000. Mr. Marshall has plans drawn for a 12-apartment building that he will build on the lot backing up to Smith's on Lomita avenue. This building, Mr. Marshall stated last night, will cost between $15,000 and $20,000. The reason for the changing of this setback line is that the lots are shallow and will not permit the construction of the desired buildings unless the set-back line is changed.

HACKENSCHMIDT SIGNS WITH CIRCUS

Noted Glendale Wrestler Will Travel With Organization

When the Al G. Barnes circus takes the road this summer a Glendale man will be with the show. John Hackenschmidt, who is well known in Southern California as a wrestler, signed a contract with that show today to go with it during the summer season. Hackenschmidt or "Hack" as he is known here is well known for his mat victories in the southern part of the state. One of his most notable victories was the taking all of the laurels and most of the wind from the aspirations of the alleged heavyweight wrestling champion of Canada, Jack McDonald.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

SAVING STEPS
By M. JESSIE LEITCH

The sick man lay in bed and scoffed at doctors. He also scoffed at medicines. And the thought of operations. And the world in general. It was rather hard on his wife, who had to put up with his scoffing. She forgave him everything because he was sick. But his sickness was really no excuse for his state of mind and attitude toward life.

Sometimes a proportionate part of illness is a state of mind. The man, in this instance, was generally calling for things. Especially when his wife was downstairs.

Was a Difficult Patient
She would have to come to the foot of the stairs to ask him what he wanted, and sometimes when she was in the basement or at the back door or the telephone when his bell tinkled it was rather harder than usual on her.

Then, too, the wife in her anxiety to please the husband, who had made up his mind to be miserable, took a great many steps she might have saved herself.

The man was not too sick to eat. And he was very particular about having hot soup and his tea or coffee after his meals, and he was inclined to rage a little if things were not exactly as one might expect them at the Ritz.

There were two thermos bottles in the cupboard off the kitchen, which might have been utilized during the man's illness, had his wife but thought of them.

There was a small table in the attic which might have been placed in the hall outside the sick man's bedroom and used as a service table. Upon it clean glasses and spoons, a thermos bottle of cold water, or one of hot soup for the afternoon nourishment, might have been placed to save needless trips to and from the kitchen.

Neighbor Makes Suggestions
One evening a neighbor dropped in at mealtime and found the patient woman, who was worrying along as best she could with her invalid, endeavoring to have her aching feet by making one trip up the stairs cover the serving of supper.

"I'll have to come down again for the coffee," said the woman, who had been running up and down stairs all day. Her face had fallen into tired lines, and when she stood still she eased her feet by standing first on one and then on the other.

"Put the coffee in your thermos bottle. Let me help," said the neighbor, who made every step tell. So it was done. A second thermos bottle was filled with cool water, and at the suggestion of the neighbor the extra glasses and a small tray were carried upstairs into the hall outside the bedroom door, and the small table in the attic was brought into use.

Found Time To Take Rest
In time the medicine bottles, which had been kept in the bath-

BAREFOOT BOY IS NEED OF COUNTRY SAYS BURBANK

Care Plant Life Gets Should Be Given Youth Says Wizard

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—The same care and treatment necessary to bring plant life to its greatest development, is necessary to child life, if the human race is to be brought to its highest development.

That is the opinion of Luther Burbank, "plant wizard," who made his views known in an interview with the United Press. "All animal life is sensitive to environment, but of all living things the child is the most sensitive. In the course of my many years of investigation into the plant life of the world, creating new forms, this thought in relation to children has always been uppermost in my mind.

"Surroundings act upon a child as the outside world acts on the plate of a camera. Every possible influence will leave its impress on the child, even overcoming heredity.

"I believe that the wave of public dishonesty which seems to be sweeping over the country is chiefly due to the lack of proper training—breeding, if you please—in the formative years of life.

"Be honest with the child. Countenance dishonesty in word, look or deed, and you have started a greater. Nor can you be dishonest with your child in thought. The child reads your motives as no other human being reads them.

Keep the child out of doors. He will learn valuable lessons from nature, and nature's God. Shun early education in the academic sense as you would shun a plague.

"Pick out any trait which you may desire in a normal child, honesty, fairness, purity, loveableness, industry, thrift, what not; by surrounding the child with sunshine from the open sky and from your heart, giving it free communion with nature, and well balanced, nutritious food, and you can endow it for all its life with these traits.

"There may be a struggle at first. For heredity will make itself felt. As in plant, there will be strong tendencies to reversion to former ancestral traits. But by patience, persistence and wise guidance through these formative years, you may fully attain the desired object.

"And if you have endowed one generation with this character half the battle will be won.

"A child literally absorbs environment. It is the most susceptible thing in the world to influence. The life of a child can be practically moulded by the influences with which it comes in contact.

"I make a plea for the revival of the barefoot boy—the boy who knows and loves nature. I must enter a most earnest protest against beginning education at the kindergarten age.

"No boy or girl should be permitted to see the inside of a school house until he is at least 10 years of age. I am speaking now of the boy or girl who has the privilege of being reared in the only place that is truly fit to bring up a boy or a girl—the country, the small town—the nearer nature the better.

"In the case of children born in the city and compelled to live there, the temptations are so great, the life so artificial, the atmosphere so like that of a hot-house, that such a child should be placed in school earlier as a matter of safeguard.

Not only would I have a child reared for the first ten years of its life in the open, in close touch with nature—a barefoot boy with all the physical stamina that implies—but also I would have him reared in love."

ences with which it comes in contact.

COUNCIL CHARTER TO REACH BOY SCOUTS APRIL 13

H. L. Benner Announces Great Day at the Presentation

The council charter will be presented to the Verdugo Hills District council by the National council of the Boy Scouts of America on the evening of April 13 at the Glendale Union High school, is the announcement made yesterday by H. L. Benner, Boy Scout executive for this district. A letter to all scoutmasters and their assistants notifying them of the presentation and requesting that all members of every troop in the district be present at this ceremony has been sent out by the program committee.

The presentation of this charter will be one of the most important events to the scouts of this district. It will be especially important to the 350 or more scout officials and leaders that comprise the council membership. In order to have every member of each troop in the district present at the ceremony a program has been worked out giving every troop some definite task. The program is divided into two parts, A and B. The first half of the program consists chiefly of scout activities and every scout will be particularly anxious to take part, as it is the wish of the committee arranging the program to have the parents see what the boys do when in action. The second section of the program will include addresses by big men of affairs and the presentation of the charter to the council members. Every one of the 40 members of the council will be on the stage at this ceremony. The charter will be presented by Stuart W. French, member of the twelfth regional committee, and president of Pasadena Boy Scout council.

It is announced that there will be no charge for admission to this ceremony and that the parents, scouts and their friends are invited to attend the affair. Reserved seats may be secured in Glendale from A. T. Cowan in Burbank, from L. F. Collins, Eagle Rock, from Dr. Harry B. Crawford and in Tujunga from C. M. Insley.

Mrs. Mary Baxter of 426 Ivy street, entertained the employees of Webb's Dry Goods store Wednesday evening at a very charming party.

Anderson. Another contest was the guessing of what certain advertisements stood for. Mrs. E. L. McGhee was awarded the prize for this.

Miss Gladys Crannell favored the party with several piano solos and Mrs. Dunn sang several vocal numbers.

At the close of this pleasant evening, refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the hostess.

Mrs. Carroll Mark, national first vice president presided and helped to organize this county council.

The officers elected for this county were, Mrs. Bailey of Pomona, president; Mrs. Schorer of Alhambra, first vice president; Mrs. Sarr of South Pasadena, second vice president; Mrs. Fuller of Post No. 54, Los Angeles, third vice president; Mrs. Cummings of Venice, treasurer; Mrs. Olmstead of Post No. 8, Los Angeles, secretary.

The president of the Legion council, Mr. Bixby of South Pasadena was present and helped organize.

Mrs. Perry Thomas, secretary, also helped organize. The first meeting of the newly formed council will be held April 7, and at that time they hope to be fully organized so that they can help the boys. The main purpose of this new council is to cooperate with the Legion boys and help the various Legion posts of Los Angeles county.

Mrs. Carroll Mark, national first vice president will be with the local auxiliary at their next meeting, April 3. A splendid program is being planned for that time and they are expecting a wonderful treat from Mrs. Mark.

There are three delegates from each auxiliary which go to make up this county council. They have not been chosen as yet, but will be at the next local meeting.

It was asked that the ladies of the Guild be sure not to forget to sew their pound ball of carpet rags for their Lenten work.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN HOLD BIBLE CLASS MEET

The Women's Bible class of the Presbyterian church of which Mrs. M. P. Harrison is teacher, met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John E. Colvin, 1235 East Lexington drive.

The assistant hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. H. L. McCluskey and Mrs. Louise A. Mansfield.

A short business session was held and this was followed by a pleasant social afternoon, during the course of which the hostesses served refreshments of ice cream and cake. This class meets once a month at the different homes.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB MEETING

Members of the Glendale Business and Professional Women's club will hold a combined business and social meeting in their club rooms at 209½ South Brand boulevard next Tuesday evening, March 28.

This is the regular monthly gathering of the full club and some interesting surprises have been provided by Dr. Laura Brown, chairman of the hospitality committee, and every member should be present.

An excellent audience came out to enjoy the concert given at the Pacific Avenue Methodist church Thursday evening by Keumoku Louis, Hawaiian vocalist and guitarist, who was assisted by Mr. Olerich, pianist.

It fully met expectations, both artists giving a rather unusual program which delighted all hearers. It was a church benefit, but the returns have not yet been computed.

The Mary Jane Gillette Tent, Daughters of Veterans, of which Mrs. Susie Peck is president, will entertain Saturday afternoon from 1:30 to 4:30 with a reception for the N. P. Banks Post, G. A. R. Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans, the occasion being the second birthday of the Tent.

A fine program is being arranged and during the course of the afternoon refreshments will be served.

Dr. Jessie Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Watson of this city were guests at the banquet and dinner given by the Optimist Club of Southern California at Hotel Alexandria in Los Angeles Thursday night. It is an annual function and the elaborate banquet of many courses and the dance which followed was a brilliant affair very largely attended.

Unity Chapter, 116, R. A. M., met Thursday night at the Masonic temple to confer the Royal Arch degree. Dinner was served at 6:15 to about 100. Spring flowers and fern were used on the tables.

This meeting was the occasion for a visit from the Grand High Priest Mattison B. Jones, and Grand Lecturer Dan B. Richards, of San Francisco, both of whom gave splendid talks. After these talks, the degree was conferred by the Grand High Priest Ira L. Vance and his officers. Later, the Grand High Priest and the Grand Lecturer left for a tour of the Colima district.

Expectation had been on tiptoe for the numbers of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Edward Cavanah, artists who have recently made Glendale their home city and who had not been heard here in concert before.

They are the fortunate possessors of fine mezzosopranos and voices which blend so wonderfully that they specialize in duets. Their numbers were "Until" (Sanderson); "A Grey Dawn" (Johnson); "A Dream" (Bartlett), and in response to enthusiastic applause they sang an encore version of "Genevieve." Mrs. Mary Newman, their pianiste, is a very fine accompanist.

Another group of numbers which greatly delighted the audience was played by Mrs. Bronie Horowitz, the harpist, who is always well come on any program. She responded with an encore after playing "Au Bide" and "Meduet," both by Hasselmans.

Closing the program were fine numbers by the Madrigal club, directed by Mrs. Charles A. Parker with Mrs. John Wright at the piano. Inspired by the big audience, the ladies of this organization reflected great credit on their director and themselves by their splendid rendition of "Dusk Witch" (Ambrose) and "Morning" (Oley Spears). Their appreciative listeners tried to recall them for an encore but did not succeed in again getting them before the footlights.

Besides the Glendaleans present there were guests from many out-of-town towns—Long Beach, Santa Monica, Santa Ana, Los Angeles, Eagle Rock and Pasadena. Mrs. Spencer Kelley, president of the Matinee Music club of Los Angeles, responded to call by Mrs. Jones and gave a word of greeting and congratulation, especially commending the work of the young people of the city. Mrs. Eva Pike, president of the Los Angeles Music Teachers' association, Mrs. Braeser of Eagle Rock and Julius Seyler of Pasadena were among the out-of-town guests recognized.

The program to be given tonight by the Cadman trio as a benefit for the Glendale Business and Professional Women's club, was announced, also the next concert of the Glendale Music club, to be given April 7 in the high school auditorium.

Recently Mr. McGhee, one of the officers of the club, who will be assisted by Mr. Hollingsworth, flutist, and Mrs. Henon Robinson, pianiste.

Mr. and Mrs. George May and family of 345 North Cedar street expect to return to the east about June 1. When they went back to Toledo, Ohio, last June to look after some mercantile property they expected to stay, but an advantageous sale made it possible for them to return to Glendale.

Recently Mr. McGhee, one of the officers of the club, who will be assisted by Mr. Hollingsworth, flutist, and Mrs. Henon Robinson, pianiste.

Mr. May is an experienced meat cutter and a valued employee of the Glendale Market.

MUSIC WEEK OPENS IN FINE CONCERT

Mrs. Mattison B. Jones Presides; Combined Program of Groups

Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, president of the Glendale Music club, who presided and introduced some of the entertainers at the concert given Thursday night to celebrate "music week" by local musical organizations that are members of the state federation of music clubs, was the center of the audience in her words of appreciation of the splendid program put on by local talent.

It was heard by a large audience prepared to enjoy every number, which welcomed with applause members of the high school orchestra, who opened the program with selections from "Faust," directed by Mrs. Dora Gibson. Many a professional orchestra has not played as well as these boys and girls, who triumphantly closed their contribution with the stirring "Soldiers' Chorus."

In the arrangement of the program the organizations made up of young people had been given first place, and in accordance with this plan the representatives of the juvenile auxiliary of the Glendale Music club were next heard.

Charming little Bettie Hagood, about five years old, whose playing of "Humoresque" (Dvorak) evoked a great burst of applause, which the small maid received shyly, and in response to advice from the wings played as an expert a "Spinning Song." She was followed by little Margaret Chapelle, also representing the juvenile club and not more than nine or ten years old, who played exquisitely "Under the Leaves" (Thome), and an encore number, which proved that she is a natural artist.

The girls' glee club of Glendale high gave a very good account of itself under the directorship of Earl Meeker, singing "June Rhapsody" (Davis) and "The Rosary" (Nevin) even better than when last heard here, and demonstrating that Mr. Meeker's work is progressive. Its encore was the gay "Brown Bear."

As the representative of the Junior Music club, Miss Winifred Parker played with fine technique and expression, MacDowell's "To a Water Lily," but could not be persuaded to give the encore the audience asked for.

Mrs. Dorothy Armstrong, representing the music section of the Tuesday Afternoon club, gave an artistic violin interpretation of Cadman's "Sky Blue Water," followed by a very beautiful rendition of "On the Banks of the Stream" (Bols du Sras). Miss Gertrude Champlain served as her piano accompanist.

WIFE OF SANTA MONICA JUDGE IN CONCERT

Mrs. Wm. Garrett to Give Reading With Cadman Trio Tonight

This is just a reminder of the beautiful melodrama of Hiawatha which is to be presented Friday evening in the auditorium of the chamber of commerce by the Cadman Trio of artists as a benefit for the Business and Professional Women's club.

Mrs. William R. Garrett, wife of Judge Garrett of Santa Monica is the dramatic reader, Miss Alma Geiger, the professional pianiste of our own city, who is much in request in Los Angeles and elsewhere, will play the musical setting of the poem composed by Saidee Knowland Coe, and the well-known soloist, Constance Balfour, will sing numbers from the Cadman Indian suite.

In its beautiful Indian stage setting the performance is thoroughly artistic and of a character to appeal to children as well as adults. The little folk are being admitted on 25c tickets, single admission for adults being 75c.

The Allies apparently spurned a peace without victory for a victory without peace.

MUSICAL CIRCLES GET ADDITION TO MEMBERSHIP

Miss Anna Nelson, Instructor, to Open Studio on North Jackson

Miss Anna Nelson, a musical instructor of note, has just arrived in Glendale and has opened a musical studio at 346 North Jackson street, where she will accept a limited number of pupils. For weeks Miss Jackson toured Southern California in an effort to find the best location for her work, and after visiting practically every city and town in this section, decided to settle in Glendale. Her former home was Omaha, Neb. After leaving her old home she went to Portland, Ore., where she remained for several months. She was not entirely suited with that section, and as she heard a great deal about Southern California, she decided to come here and give this section the "once over." After weeks of searching she came to Glendale and she is here to stay.

Miss Nelson received her thorough musical education at Brownwell hall, Omaha, at which institution she was an instructor for quite a while. In coming to Glendale Miss Nelson brings with her the very best there is in the way of piano instruction. "I am more than pleased to find Glendale such a wonderful place," said Miss Nelson this morning. "I had heard much about this city, but did not dream that it was the jewel it is."

U. S. COCKTAILS
FIND REFUGE
IN S. A.

BUENOS AIRES (By Mail to United Press).—What becomes of the cocktail mixer of yesterday? The chap who devoted their youth to perfecting sparkling "Manhattan," "gin fizzes" and the rest of the imposing array that formerly graced the bar lists in the United States?

A tour of the bars of Buenos Aires might reveal the whereabouts of some of these famous persons, for a big percentage of the local cafes are equipped with a cocktail mixer who speaks unmistakable New Yorkese. Nor are the cafes any too modest about it. One has just flaunted a three-column advertisement in an English daily, announcing that the head cocktail mixer of the steamer "Southern Cross" would favor the restaurant with his presence on such a night. It then proceeds to list the waiter's former haunts, including three New York and Chicago hotels and the Panama Pacific exposition.

"Why, Margaret," began the mother of the family flapper, as the flapper closed her school books and made for the rack that held her coat. "You aren't through studying yet? You've hardly begun!"

"Oh, it's quite all right, mother," said the family flapper. "I can get the rest on my way to class tomorrow. And I promised to meet Anna."

"You're not going to the movies again?" protested her mother.

"Oh, we're just going to run in at the Hippodrome for a few minutes. There's a new play with Molly Dalmadge that we've got to see."

"Now, mother, don't look so disgusted. You know perfectly well that I've got to know what's happening at places like the Hippodrome. How would I feel if some one at school asked me how I liked Molly Dalmadge and I'd never even seen her? It'd be just as if some one asked you about a new book that everyone ought to read. You'd be horribly embarrassed if you hadn't."

"What? Why, no, I haven't been so very often this week. Only when I went with Mary on Monday, and that time I just asked me and that perfectly darling play with Fleda Marrow in it. You see, Mary and I had to go Monday, because we heard there was a new star in it who had a perfectly stunning new way of wearing her hair. We have to notice things like that, you know, mother."

"Probably all the other girls will be trying to do their hair that way in a few days, and Mary and I felt that we wanted to be the first ones. Yes, that was what made me look so funny Tuesday. I suppose it wasn't so very becoming, but girls can't stop at things because they're extreme nowadays. You must have noticed that."

"Well, and then I did go to another one that I forgot. It was a dramatization of something—Dickens—I think. You see, I don't have time to read those foggy old things, and I had to write a review of that book for the class in English, so it was really part of my school work. I didn't get a good mark on the review because the picture wasn't at all like the book, but that wasn't my fault, was it? Just because I try to be up to date and save a little time—Dickens ought to have written it that way, anyhow—it was much better."

"And of course when Jane asked me to go with her I couldn't very well refuse; it might have hurt her feelings. Besides, I don't want people to think I'm old-fashioned."

ROTARIANS HOLD
FULL MEETING

J. Herbert Smith Reports

From Seventh Annual Conference

Glendale's Rotary club had an unusually enthusiastic luncheon meeting Thursday noon at the chamber of commerce, all local members except two being present, and Vice-President Roy Kent presiding.

A fine report of the seventh annual conference of Rotary clubs of the 23rd district, held March 16, 17 and 18 in San Francisco, was made by J. Herbert Smith, who had attended as one of the delegates of the club.

The list of visiting Rotarians present included Bill Byers of Champaign, Ill.; George Baer and Roy B. Shuey of Pasadena; Shreve Durham of Shreveport, La., and C. G. Chenoweth of Pasadena. There were other visitors also—Lloyd B. Wilson, A. L. Baird and George W. Wilson of Glendale and Major William D. Morgan of Washington, D. C.

Shreve Durham, who has charge of the home visitation campaign which Glendale churches are conducting, gave a review of this movement throughout the country, which disregards sectarian lines. His talk was brief because he had to leave early to catch a train for San Diego.

An excellent address on "Citizenship" was made by Major Morgan, who heads the lecture bureau of the International Correspondence schools.

He dwelt on the rule of the majority, to which citizens of the United States subscribe and to which they yield obedience, but declared that minorities must also be respected and their rights guaranteed as good faith as the rights of the majority.

Minorities he believes, are the safety of the republic because they have the courage to protest against the things they believe to be wrong and majorities sometimes err, but can be made to see their error.

The speaker's creed also included the declaration that the good American citizen will obey every law whether he thinks it is a good law or a bad law. He obeys it because it is on the statute books of his country and his great article of faith is, "My country, right or wrong, my country." If it proves to be a bad law he trusts the wisdom of the majority to repeal it. The point was made that the citizen should first obey and then protest if he cannot endorse a law. It was but a step further to point on the obligation of the citizen to support officers who are trying to enforce the law, and his talk closed with the expressed conviction that America's good citizens everywhere unite to back up the efforts of the law enforcement officers.

Major Morgan's talk was followed with close attention and made a visible impress on the listening Rotarians.

SPLIT RANKS OF COAL UNION ARE REUNITED

Strike Will Be a Total Compact Blow Against Operators

CLEVELAND, March 24.—Danger of a split in the ranks of the United Mine Workers of America was averted today. Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois miners, who has been holding out for separate state wage negotiations with operators, threatening an internal break in the union, told members of the mine policy committee, meeting here, that Illinois miners would strike with other bituminous workers April 1.

"We're going to strike on April 1 and we're going to keep on striking until some of the others holler," said Farrington. Farrington thus exploded the fear of international officers that the Illinois miners might break with the main body and prevent the strike call for April 1.

The Illinois chief also denied a report that the Illinois miners had come to any kind of an agreement with the operators. Wordy battles featured the policy committee session. Farrington, replying to a question as to why the Illinois miners were planning meetings with the operators before the strike, said it was in their contract and they had to.

"But," he shouted, "when you strike, we'll be with you, win or fail."

At this William Roy, vice-president of the Ohio miners, leaped to his feet.

"We're going farther than that, Farrington," he said. "We're going to be fighting even after you fail."

An almost tearful plea to keep fighting until the victory is won was made by Fred Mooney, Mingo county miner, under indictment in connection with the mine disturbances in West Virginia. President John L. Lewis of the miners presented a general outline of the strike situation.

GLENDALE HAS COMMUNITY IDEAL

J. H. Stanford Declares Home Owning Is Big Note Here

"The big thing about Glendale is that a large percentage of the residents are home owners," said J. H. Stanford, realty and building, 12 1/2 South Brand boulevard this morning. "In fact, this is the 'big thing' in connection with any community. When a person owns his own home he is naturally in everything that would have any bearing on the value of his property. Any improvement that is made in a city is bound to have the effect of enhancing the value of every piece of property within the limits of that city. This being true, the residents are naturally going to strive for everything that would improve the city as a whole, and will be stubbornly opposed to everything that would in any way detract from the attractiveness of the community as a whole."

"With all of the homeowners of Glendale working for Glendale property here cannot help but advance, especially when Glendale has such wonderful natural features with which to back up this effort on the part of the citizens."

"This 'Own your own home' week is a great proposition. Home building naturally creates business and the result of this week will be not only to put dozens of thrifty people in homes of their own, but will help everyone in the city. The lumber merchant, the hardware dealer, the workmen engaged in the various lines of home building, etc., will each get their share of the prosperity. This will make business in general better and as a result everyone will be happy."

In the real estate department of this firm is listed everything in the way of vacant and improved property, which lies in every section of the city, this company making a specialty of land in desirable locations—sections in which the most discriminating person would be glad to reside. The building department takes care of everything in the building line, from the mansion to the 3-room dwelling.

The doctor called on a man who was ill, and told the wife that she must put him into a recumbent position.

"A recumbent position," said the doctor.

As soon as he had gone, she went to a neighbor and said: "Mrs. Brown, could you lend me a recumbent position?"

But Mrs. Brown was determined not to show her ignorance, and answered: "I'm very sorry, my dear, but I've just lent mine to Mrs. Smith."

If Charles Chaplin's bride is wise, she'll cook no big, soft lemon pies.

Graft often goes about disguised as a business opportunity.

HOWE'S ANIMAL CIRCUS SURPRISES SPECTATORS

Outstanding Features Predominate in Calif. Amusement Enterprise

Howe's Great London Circus with Can Amberg's trained wild animals will exhibit in Glendale, afternoons and evenings on Friday, April 7.

Advertising car No. 2, with its twenty billposters, arrived here today and every available space is covered with the flaming posters that so delight the hearts of the juvenile as well as many of the older ones. For the circus is a recreation dear to every American boy or girl, men or women. An extra brigade of experts with automobiles will cover the country for miles around and a week later another brigade will come to see that none miss the chance of knowing of its coming.

The Howe-Van Amberg organization is now under the direction and management of San Francisco capitalists who have infused new blood, brains and capital into a going business already strong in public favor. The Van Amberg's and their priceless collection of trained wild animals will continue a feature, but many new and distinct specialties are offered.

"Milk" and "Bessie" are baby cub lions, born at winter quarters in Palo Alto on the occasion of the lion show's visit, January 10, 1922; a baby monkey is also entitled to consideration for citizenship, arriving at about the same time; "Mizpah" is a white or Albino camel, said to be the sole survivor of his kind and heading the only troupe of camels broken to perform; the "Riding Lion" on horseback; "The Balloon Lion"; Jules Jacob's world's most intrepid wild animal trainer; Mlle. LaNova and Mlle. Falkenstorf, fearless lady animal trainers of international fame; the spectacular pageant "Cinderella in Jangleland"; and only a few of the many and distinct novelties of "The World's Wonder Show," as this unique and wonderful consolidation has been rightfully termed.

There will be a street parade, bands, callioles, open dens and well worth coming miles to see. When the admission has been reduced to fifty cents, not that the show is not worth a dollar, but because the management thinks "war prices" should go, resulting in more business.

In the real estate department of this firm is listed everything in the way of vacant and improved property, which lies in every section of the city, this company making a specialty of land in desirable locations—sections in which the most discriminating person would be glad to reside. The building department takes care of everything in the building line, from the mansion to the 3-room dwelling.

The doctor called on a man who was ill, and told the wife that she must put him into a recumbent position.

"A recumbent position," said the doctor.

As soon as he had gone, she went to a neighbor and said: "Mrs. Brown, could you lend me a recumbent position?"

But Mrs. Brown was determined not to show her ignorance, and answered: "I'm very sorry, my dear, but I've just lent mine to Mrs. Smith."

If Charles Chaplin's bride is wise, she'll cook no big, soft lemon pies.

ROUND TRIP TICKETS TO NORTHWEST

Southern Pacific to Issue Excursion Rates on Its Lines

Effective April 28, summer round trip excursion tickets from all stations on Southern Pacific lines in California south of Mojave and Santa Barbara to the Pacific Northwest will be placed on sale. This will be the first year that round trip rates have ever been put into effect from Southern California points to the northwest cities.

Tickets will be sold daily from Santa Barbara, Mojave, Riverside, Colton, San Bernardino, Whittier, Santa Ana, Long Beach and intermediate points to Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Victoria, Vancouver, and Spokane, permitting stopovers on both going and returning trips.

Round trip fares from Los Angeles to Pacific Northwest points are as follows: To Portland, $78.75; to Tacoma, $88; to Seattle, $90.50; to Victoria, $95.50; to Vancouver, $100.75; to Spokane, $103. Corresponding rates from other Southern California points.

The low rates are expected to cause many Southern California residents to make the trip to Oregon during the summer months, when the northwest country is especially attractive.

QUAKES DUE TO SHIFT OF EARTH ON ITS AXIS

So Says Dr. Campbell of Lick Observatory at Mount Hamilton

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Several weeks ago, when seismographs throughout the world recorded an earthquake of terrible proportions somewhere beneath the bed of the Pacific ocean, a European scientist startled the public by announcing the earthquake had been caused by the earth shifting its axis.

If anyone feels any deep concern over the earth's ailment, however, he can perhaps be reassured by the statement of Dr. W. W. Campbell, director of Lick Observatory, Mt. Hamilton, Calif.

Dr. Campbell declares that the earth undoubtedly did shift its axis, but that there is no cause for concern, inasmuch as the axis is habitually shifted in this manner.

The earth, declared Dr. Campbell, is very seldom "on center."

"It has been known for nearly 40 years that the position of the axis of the earth shifts a little," declared Dr. Campbell. "The shift is slow and continual. If we could station ourselves at the north pole and actually see the point where the axis of rotation comes to the surface, we should find in the course of decades and centuries that this point is constantly moving around, irregularly, within a circular area of about 60 or 65 feet in diameter. Its average location would be the center of the circle; once in every decade or two the end of the rotation axis would be close to the center. But a few years later it would be as much as 30 feet from the center of the circle."

"This is partly caused by the accumulation of snow and ice; excess atmosphere on the unsymmetrical land areas of the northern hemisphere in the winter, and the vanishing of these three items in the northern spring and summer, and likewise to the influence of air and ocean currents."

"Lord Kelvin computed 45 years ago that if the earth were completely leveled, the dissymmetry of mass compared with the present unevenness would cause the earth's axis of rotation to shift through a distance of 100 feet."

"If a beautifully balanced flywheel of an engine were thrown out of balance by depositing an extra weight on a section of its rim, it would try to shift its axis of rotation, and if the bearings of the wheel were yielding or movable, the axis of rotation would actually change. The earth is just like the flywheel."

"We do not know positively that there is any connection between such shifting of the earth's axis and earthquakes, but the connection is strongly suspected."

"When the unsymmetrical loaded flywheel tries to change its position, it causes earthquakes."

"Great earthquakes whose origin can be traced with confidence to their actual sources lie on land nearly always declare their location by visible disturbances in the surface strata. The reason is that most great earthquakes are associated with and result from actual relative movements of immense masses of earth materials. These movements occur along breaks or cracks in the rock strata, known as geologic faults."

"Some of these fault lines or surfaces, well-known to geologists, are hundreds of miles in length, and doubtless extend down through the rock strata thousands of feet—possibly several miles. It is a known fact that similar faults lie under the bed of the ocean."

"Before we can definitely locate the recent heavy shock somewhere under the bed of the Pacific, we must wait until records are obtainable from Japan, Australia and other countries—particularly as the needles of most of the seismographs in this country were thrown off the charts by the heavy indication of earth movements."

"Hello, Fred! How did you get on in Scotland?"

"Oh, fine, Jack. We had grand weather all the time. By the way, do you know, I heard a funny thing when I was there."

"Indeed!" said Jack. "What was it?"

"Well, they told me that they didn't hang a man with a wooden leg in Scotland."

"That's queer!" said Jack.

"How's that?"

"Oh, they hang 'em with a rope as a rule!" was the reply.

The verger was interested in the form of a bill that accompanied the delivery of three tons of coal to the rectory. He could not understand why the bill should be made out: "One ton of coal, 55 shillings; ditto, ditto." The rector explained that the use of the word "ditto" saved the writing of the whole sentence three times.

The next Sunday morning the verger surprised the congregation by announcing: "Hymn No. 163: Art thou weary? Ditto languid? Ditto sore distressed?"

THE EVENING STORY

THE WAY IN

(Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner)

Before Elly Worth moved into the little green house she had heard all about Mrs. Strand.

"You'll like everybody in the neighborhood excepting her," said old Mrs. Travis, who had lived long in Exford and knew nearly everybody, or at least professed to know everybody. "Mrs. Strand is a very peculiar woman—one of the high and mighty kind. She was a Seymour, and all the Seymours I ever heard tell of always held their heads way above everybody else. When Helen Seymour married Orson Strand everybody knew just how it would be—she'd cock her chin a couple of inches higher, and she did. For all the Seymours ever lacked was money, and, of course, Orson Strand had plenty of that."

"She looks as if she might be nice," said Elly, who was young and very much taken up with the prospects of having a house of her own after several transitory years of renting.

"Oh, yes, she gets her good looks from her mother's side of the house, where there was a plenty of them. She's handsome, and she can smile wonderfully, but what's a smile when there's no liking behind it? Maybe she'll get so she'll speak to you and maybe she won't. But remember this, you needn't put yourself out any to be friendly with her, because it won't amount to the least thing."

Elly, thus informed, moved into the little green house, which Will had brought on a contract. They had been married only three years and their home-making equipment was bright and new. Elly had never had so much room before.

"Think of it, Will!" she said over and over. "Six whole rooms, not including the bathroom and two closets! I never had so much space before in my whole life. Why, I shall feel just like a bird who has all outdoors to live in after having been shut up in a cage."

Four rooms below and two above, with a porch, a tree, garden space, and a goodly patch of lawn! Of course these external charms were somewhat obscured by snow, but Will looked forward to his garden. Meanwhile Elly arranged and rearranged her house, putting everything to the best advantage, and all the time feeling as happy as it is possible for a woman to feel who is young, loved, and loving, and is enjoying her first real home.

One by one the neighbors came to call. There was Mrs. Munn, a dear, friendly old lady, and Miss Dale, who was middle-aged and merry, and all the other folk who lived in the houses round about. Elly liked them and believed that she was going to be on the best of terms with them all. Mrs. Strand did not come because she was not at home. She had gone to the city to spend a few weeks enjoying the sights and the theaters. The big white house beyond the hedge was closed and silent.

Elly found herself looking at it often with an uncontrollable curiosity. It was a beautiful old house with wide grounds about it full of shrubs and trees, just such a house as one would expect a Mrs. Strand to live in.

"It's a pity we should never be friends or even friendly neighbors," Elly thought, wistfully. "Somehow I feel as if I might like her very much if she would let me."

One night the house was bright with lights and Elly knew that Mrs. Strand had come home. She could see her moving about within, tall and graceful, in a glowing dress. Mrs. Strand was dark. Elly, who was small and fair, had always worshiped the brunette goddesses.

A day or two later Elly happened to be looking out of a window just as Mrs. Strand was looking out, too, rather hesitantly. Elly thought. Their glances seemed to cross for an instant but Mrs. Strand made no sign. She turned away first.

Elly's cheeks flamed. "She might have just nodded, she thought. 'Of course, I've never met her, but we're neighbors. She can't get around that.'"

It was a wild afternoon, bleak and cold. Elly felt lonely and restless. She was counting the hours until Will came home to supper. There did not seem to be anything to do in the whole house, and she did not care much for reading. She was like a child that seeks amusement. Yet she did not want to go out of doors. It was too cold, and the wind swaying the trees frightened her.

Suddenly she found a streak of dust on the white cotton blouse she was wearing. She rubbed at it and it wouldn't come off. Here was something to do at last. She snatched the blouse off and proceeded to "tub" it. Elly had only this one nice blouse. Never mind, she would have it washed and dried and ironed, ready to put on before Will could get home.

Elly washed the waist, rinsed, and prepared to rinse it again in bluing water. She kept the bluing in a big bottle on the top shelf of the cupboard. She had the bottle in her hand and was jumping off the chair she stood upon when it slipped. The bottle struck something, and when she landed on her feet she saw that she had not only broke the bottle and spilt bluing all over her clean kitchen, but had cut a finger to the bone.

Elly never could bear the sight of blood. Moreover, she had no clear ideas of first aids to the injured. She could only run to the telephone and call a number. Will at the bank? No, she could bleed to death before he got there! That morning Miss Dale had called up to ask for a recipe she had mentioned. The number 301 came to her now and she gave it. Then she fainted.

When she opened her eyes there was something very tight about her finger and her head was in the lap of a woman who held her very tenderly. Elly looked up dizzily into the face above her, and saw, not Miss Dale's kindly face, but Mrs. Strand's beautiful young one. The surprise did as much for her as a stimulant. She raised herself up.

Mrs. Strand said quickly: "The minute I heard your voice I knew who it was and I came." She had pouched through the snow in silk stockings and suede pumps, bareheaded.

"It's good of you," Elly replied. She wondered what had happened. Lines crossed possibly by the wind. "But—what did you do to my finger?" she asked.

"I put a tourniquet on it. That now to be done up properly. After that we'll clean up this blue stuff." All this Mrs. Strand insisted on doing herself, while Elly protested as vigorously as one might who was still rather sick. But, however, it happened by the time things were at rights again and her finger feeling better she and Mrs. Strand had arrived at a state of neighborliness that nothing in the world could ever disturb.

"I called 301, Miss Dale's number," said Mrs. Strand, "Elly told Will that evening. She was still wearing the white bungalow apron in which he had found her, for the white blouse would not be ironed until next day. She looked a little pale, but her finger did not hurt much."

"Are you sure 301 is Miss Dale's number?" asked Will. He took the directory from its hook and glanced through it. Suddenly he laughed.

"Fate's in this, Elly," he said. "Miss Dale's number is 103. But never mind. You've found your longed-for way into Mrs. Strand's good graces at last."

It's the after effect of experience that counts.

When a man is a bore he is always the last to discover it.

Canadian Minister of Finance Here to Seek Better Trade Relations

William S. Fielding, Canadian Minister of finance, has been in Washington urging reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Canada. This is the first move on the part of Canada, according to reports following Mr. Fielding's visit at the White House to forestall any unfavorable action in congress in dealing with the tariff relations between the two countries. The above photograph was made while Mr. Fielding was in Washington.

VALUES IVORY AT HIGH PRICE

PORTLAND, Ore., March 24.—Lorenzo Elwood trusted much. The dentist waited him away to the land of dreams, both of them secure that when he returned to consciousness the aching tooth would ache no more.

But the best laid plans of mice and dentists gang aft aglee, and Elwood is now suing Dr. D. E. Loomis for "carelessly and negligently" extracting the wrong tooth. Elwood believes his good tooth to be worth $15,000, the amount called for in his suit.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients in a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—Adv.

THE RAVEN MAKES TROUBLE FOR THE MICE

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

"The raven?" The red dog chuckled to himself. Dr. Muskrat simply wouldn't let him stop talking about that bird. He seemed determined the raven would be the villain of Pal's tale if Shem wasn't. "Oh, the raven was right there."

"It was the ghostly, shadowy time between night and day when the elephant clanged down the anchor chain and rumbled down the deck so the whole Ark trembled beneath him. They thought he'd found a snake or a monstrous spider or some such thing with a terrible bite. And those who couldn't run 'count of being locked up, yelled that it was coming after them. Nobody dreamed what it was except the elephant himself—and he was tooting like a steam whistle, so he had no wind to talk with."

"And the raven? He knew. He's known for a long, long time where the mice were living, and what they were doing there. But he couldn't get at them. Not till the elephant gave that chain a shake. Then he flapped down, looking tremendous brave, and croaked, 'Be aisy, folks. Be aisy.' 'Tis mesself will be aither investigation!'"

"They saw him pick, peck, pick. They saw him cock his head. They saw him peek here and peer there. He had found something, all right enough, but what it was he didn't mention. It wasn't convenient. Nor mannerly, either. Even a bird knows better than to speak with its beak full."

"But he was so plainly busy Mister Noah paddled up in his bare feet and asked, 'Well, well, and what is it?'" the truth, from the corner of his beak still hung the last little mouse's tail. But he wasn't ashamed. He just talked very fast so Mr. Noah couldn't edge in a word. "Mice. And it's yer honor's ropes they're after knowin' and chawin' for to soften their bits av nests for their little ones. The nerve av them! Och, ain't they the villains? Ain't they now?"

"And Mister Noah forgot all about what the raven had been doing. He cursed those mice from tail to whiskers. 'So that is what's

LIE DETECTOR IS FOUND USEFUL

BERKELEY, Cal., March 24.—The "truth serum" system is fast being rivalled by the "lie detecting machine" in use in the police department, where Chief Vollmer, the "scientific chief of police," reigns. The name of the instrument, in case you want to know it for handy reference, is sphygmomanometer.

The machine detects the rush of blood to certain parts of the body, and indicates, by an uncontrollable quickening of pulsations on the part of the victim whether he is telling the truth. Mere embarrassment or fear are registered in different ways, and the Berkeley police say there is but little chance of making a mistake.

Four youths were charged with ten automobile thefts. Patrolman John A. Larson, Ph.D., applied the "lie detecting machine" test to them and the results showed that in answer to certain questions the boys had lied.

Confronted with the results, and told specifically that they were lying on certain points, all of the boys broke down and confessed, not only to the auto thefts, but to an assault and several robberies.

wrong with my ropes?" he shouted. "There's not a sound one aboard the ship. How do you expect me to navigate?" he broke off and took to stamping. And then he stubbed his toe. And you'd have thought the mice did that to him the way he raved at the poor scared things."

GRANT MEMORIAL WILL BE UNVEILED AT WASHINGTON ON APRIL 27

GRANT MEMORIAL TO BE UNVEILED IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

A great memorial to former President Grant will be unveiled in the Botanical Gardens at Washington on April 27, marking the culmination of twenty years of work by the designer and sculptor, Henry Merwin Shrady of New York, whose father, Dr. George F. Shrady, attended the famous military leader up to the time of his death. The work is pyramidal in outline, with all the minor figures and groups sweeping up to General Grant, astride his horse, in the center of the memorial. The complete work is one of the most beautiful ever conceived.

Sandy and Douglas were paying their first visit to London. They discovered that the ways of the big hotel were not their ways. In the morning they prepared to go out, but were unable to find the staircase. Sandy discovered the elevator shaft open and he promptly stepped in and tumbled to the bottom. Learning over, Donald called to his friend: "Did ye get down all right, Sandy?" "That I did," replied Sandy; "but, mon, be careful of that first step; 'tis a brute!"

Fashions for Americans

A novelty knitted fabric in plain color and a rough plaid wool fabric are combined in the sports suit and hat shown in the sketch. They were designed for mid-season or early spring wear. The method of combining the two fabrics is interesting. But the hat and the suit may come as useful suggestions to the woman who is planning a utility costume or hunting for a style suitable for making over a last season outfit. Knickerbockers might well be made a part of such a costume, as they are constantly gaining in favor, and certainly they are very practical for sports wear.

The coat of the suit shown features a waist line a trifle lower than normal, the coat being a straight one drawn in merely by the placing of the belt. Some very smart early spring sports suits combine plain material in high color with narrow checked fabrics blending with the plain fabric and a popular coat style is the straight pony coat fastened at the neck only with button or clasp. Such a suit was recently seen in a plaid twilled fabric blending white and purple combined with plain purple. The plaid was used for the skirt, and as collar, cuffs and pocket facings for the coat. A belt was supplied, to be worn or omitted according to choice. It was of the purple, so that the waist line was only indicated even when the belt was worn.

This same type of coat is often seen with the three-piece costume or dress with matching coat. One youthful suit of navy twill recently featured a dress entirely of the fabric, with rows of narrow bright red silk braid running around the figure at intervals of about five inches from bust line to hip line, with straight pony coat finished with collar, flaring cuffs, and lining of red, matching the braid.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

1922-23 STYLES IN DOGS

Bulldogs will bite harder and deeper.

Airedales will go over to the Republican party in a body.

Police dogs and bloodhounds will (at the request of the district attorney) replace Russian wolfhounds as quite the proper thing in moving picture colonies.

Hamsters or Great Dane dogs will continue to be built, too large for comfort in modern apartments.

Cock dogs will show the same color scheme as in past year, nothing having been found that will remove the black spots.

They will not run under coaches, however, there being no coaches left to run under, but experiments are now under way in crossing the cock dog with the dachshund to produce a type of the proper proportions to run under Ford roadsters.

These are the outstanding features of the trend in dog styles for 1922-23 as shown at the National Dog Show.

All breeds, judging from their conduct on exhibition, will bark louder on the coming season. If there is any truth in the old saying that a barking dog never bites it will be a great year for tramps.

Anybody who has ever spent ten minutes inside a dog show will declare it would be much more satisfactory if a biting dog never barked.

Pug dogs, once as essential a part of the Great American Home as crayon portraits and 8-day clocks, will be bred only as antiques. The "pug" has become so extinct that only one was shown at the National Bow-wow Exposition. He naturally won first, second, third and fourth prizes in his class and the ribbon for the "best them," this last trick having been accomplished by the aid of a mirror.

Bloodhounds also will be considered poor form the coming season, and any society lady who walks down the avenue with one of them in her arms will invite the scorn of the Smart Set.

As anybody knows, the only dog for the Smart Set is, so to speak, the Smart Setter. Only one bloodhound appeared at the show and he looked so forlorn and lifeless it was generally suspected he was one of the bloodhounds that chased Eliza across the ice, and, in all probability, the one Eliza chased back.

It will not be foolish to be seen with a Newfoundland during 1922-23, either. Dame Fashion has frowned upon this once popular dog to such an extent that he, too, was represented by but one entry at the show.

Newfoundland dogs once were used extensively for jumping into lakes after children and pulling them out by the skirts. Of late years these dogs have shown an utter inability to tell a child from a middle-aged woman, due to the similarity of skirt lengths, and have pulled out any number of elderly persons scarcely worth saving. The result has been to make the dog very unpopular and a little ashamed of himself.

As a matter of fact the trend is toward small models. The Vanity Case Hound, otherwise known as the Pekinese, will continue to be the delight of women with distorted ideas as to what constitutes beauty in the animal kingdom. To be a real blue-ribboner he has to have a forehead like Senator Lodge, a nose like Rocky Kansas, and a chin like that of the Crown Prince. Very pretty little thing!

Pomeranians will go good this season, too. They look lovely on sofa pillows. A real aristocratic Pom must have the facial expression of the brightest girl at Smith College and the general bearing of the president of the Women's League for Better Babies.

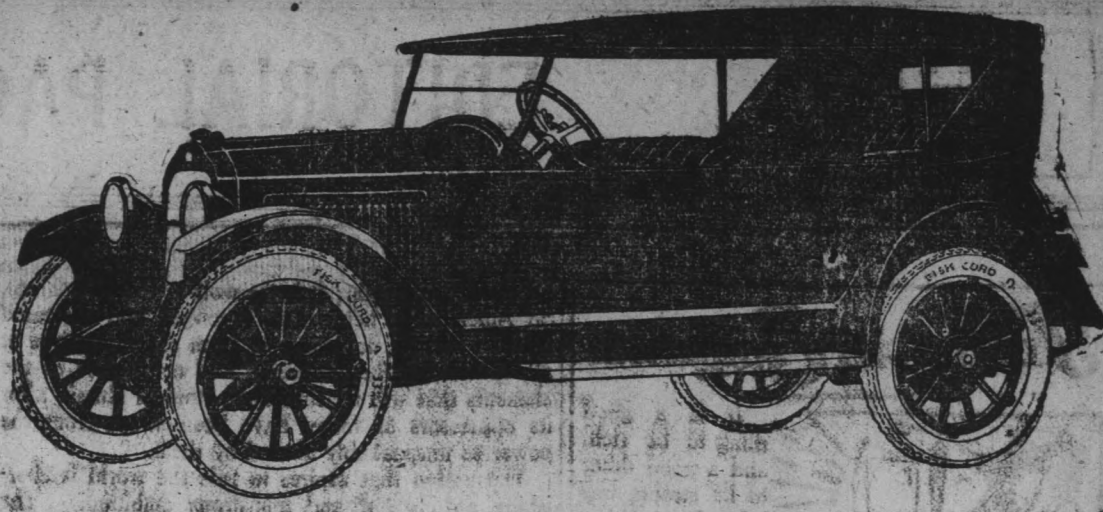

One of the best laughs at a dog show is the sight of the Pekinese dogs and Pomeranians housed in little "kissed-in" cases very much resembling Victrola cabinets. Looking at one of these flea-teasers in such a cabinet one gets the impression that if one fed it a new needle it would play "Hearts and Flowers."

RESCUES ONE GOAT NOW HAS FOUR

SALEM, Ore., March 24.—Should fortune place you in a position to render assistance to a goat in danger of his life, pause not, but spring to its aid without any fear that any member of the Genus Capra, of the Bovidae family, will transgress the laws of gratitude as did Aesop's frozen member of the group Ophidia.

Captain A. J. Spong last December rescued a goat he saw floating down the turbulent waters of the Willamette river astride a log. The doughty captain rescued her, she grew and prospered. Now he is the captain of four goats.

SCHOLASTIC GATHERING.
PADOVA, Italy, March 24.—From responses received to date, Padova is certain that the seven hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the University of Padova will witness without exception the greatest scholastic gathering the world has ever seen. An elaborate program is now being worked out for the celebration which will take place in May. Invitations for the event which were sent to all of the leading universities and colleges of the world have been accepted to an unusually large degree.

$1375

This car of refinement and quality is now within the means of those who have considered such a car beyond their hopes

It combines, in addition to the advantages of other fine cars, all of the advantages of the Knight type sleeve-valve motor.

This Willys-Knight motor actually improves—grows more powerful with use—a quality which distinguishes it from all other motors.

It requires no adjustments. It is more flexible—and it always operates quietly.

It is more powerful than any other motor of equal size, and because of this, the Willys-Knight car consumes less gasoline than any other car of equal power and weight.

These important advantages added to the beauty, economy, road comfort and extraordinary long life of the Willys-Knight car explain the enthusiasm of more than 50,000 owners.

Touring reduced $150; now $1375. Roadster reduced $125; now $1350. Coupe reduced $320; now $1875. Sedan reduced $300; now $2095.

Truths in Epigram

It is a good thing to be rich, and a good thing to be strong, but it is a better thing to be beloved of many friends. — Euripides (484-406 B. C.).

The only road, the sure road — to unquestioned credit and a sound financial condition — is the exact and punctual fulfillment of every pecuniary obligation, public and private, according to its letter and spirit. — Hayes (1822-1893).

CHICAGO'S DESPERATE FLIGHT

The good citizens of Chicago are almost in despair at the prevalence of crime there. The chief of police, apparently an able and devoted official, confesses that he is helpless. A recent meeting held by the respectable elements to devise means of relief, resulted in amazing declarations. One was that the criminal organization had its own men on the bench. Much of the blame for conditions was placed upon the so-called criminal lawyers, a conscienceless brood, who are themselves criminals first, and lawyers afterwards. The ordinary business man was not permitted to escape his share of the responsibility. The main dereliction charged against him was that he had perjured himself out of jury duty.

The sense of the meeting was that Chicago, morally and legally, was at the edge of chaos. Whether the powers of evil were strong enough to overcome organized society, was admitted to be a real question. The remedy rests with the decent people of Chicago. If they will put honest men in judgeships, tolerating no other kind, weed out the criminals licensed to practice in the courts, serve on juries as they may be called, and enforce the law without fear, the chronic and insolent offenders who not only defy justice, but spit upon the agencies of justice, may be subdued.

While criminals are on the bench, and at the bar as attorneys, and citizens shirk their obligations, permitting juries to be corrupt and incompetent, the prisoner in the dock knows that he has nothing to apprehend. Hence he continues to be a criminal, and in the aggregate, is made into a problem.

THE MODEST MODISTE

One of the New York shops devoted to creation and sale of styles has closed its doors. It was noted for the cost of its products to the consumer, and for the absurd paucity of material it supplied. Prices were not based upon material used, but apparently upon that which might have been used, and wasn't. It belonged in the class of shops which were as difficult to enter as society, and in which the ordinary mortal could venture only by risking a snub either from the footman at the door, or the superior souls within. The footman has been dismissed, and a representative of the sheriff has taken his place.

Somebody has ascribed the failure of this concern to prohibition. While it is true that a strictly sober head of a family would be likely to object to the bills, and also to the garments represented by enormous totals, the explanation is far-fetched. There are other reasons that may be cited. Among these is the fact that after a prolonged spending spree, people are getting back to a commonsense basis. The individual made suddenly rich by war either has run through the golden pile, or has been taught by scrutiny of his bank statement, that the end is in sight.

Many tradesmen who cater to the New York rich, and scorn the business offered by others, have failed because the New York rich are notoriously bad pay. Not only do they run up towering bills, and then go to Europe for a season, but the rendering to them of an account is a deadly insult, causing their patronage to be withdrawn, and used as justification for refusal to pay at all. To sue one of this class is to alienate the whole class. So the caterer to idle wealth fires the help and quits.

Considered commercially this failure is not important. It is a mere indication that people are learning to buy with discretion, and that a concern having stuff to sell must be run on business principles, or cease to run.

RATHENAU'S PROPHECY

"We are too old, all of us. We must give place to youth, and the world's three youths now are America, Russia and Japan. * * * Whichever nation, the United States or Japan, succeeds in winning the friendship and confidence of Russia in the next generation, undoubtedly will control the world before the end of this century."

Such was a part of the prediction of Walter Rathenau, foreign minister in Germany, made in 1919. It gives an insight into German methods of thinking rather than into international affairs. It clings to the notion that some one power must rule the world. Such was the idea that wrecked the kaiser's dream. Had Teutonic prophets not been bad guessers, Germany might now have been a prosperous people, among neighbors similarly conditioned.

Wherein lies the possibility of winning the friendship and confidence of Russia? If Rathenau meant official Russia, the present soviet regime, no such possibility exists. As preliminary to it, would have to be, at least the remote chance of according to Russia an equal friendship and confidence. Diplomacy may accomplish much, but a diplomat is not a snake-charmer. Russia in its role of rattler poised to strike, does not promote the impulse towards amicable approach.

Regarding the outcast Russians, who represent the brains of the old empire; regarding also the starving millions as the vital part of industrial Russia, it may be said that America is winning the friendship and has the confidence of these. The Russia to come will be constructed of the elements that now have no part in it save to bear the burden. Bolshevism maintains a gigantic army, while the people of its vast areas starve, because bolshevism took from them the grain that was needed for seed. It is strange that any diplomat could think profitable or wise to seek an understanding with an oligarchy, that in the very nature of things must be temporary. For while the oligarchy persists, Russia dies. The oligarchy is not Russia; it is the wolf at Russia's throat. So America, in helping the wronged and tortured Russian masses, not doing so from selfish motives at all, is winning the friendship and confidence of the elements that will constitute the state of Russia after its oppressors of today have been swept from the power so unspcakably abused by them.

The nation that aspires to rule the world is cherishing an insolent and monstrous ambition. The duty and province of a nation is to rule itself. An understanding with surrounding nations is imperative. If it be so amicable as to lead in the future to perfect concert of action, indicating that every people has come into the common family, and that in reality, there is but one nation, such eventuation is too immeasurably distant to consider at this time.

A CONFESSION OF FAITH

Among the papers of H. F. Condict, who died at Bakersfield recently, was found a brief autobiographical note. It recounted in a little more than 100 words, a career that extended through eighty-five years. Mr. Condict was an industrious and worthy citizen. Apparently there were no high lights in his experience. He had been a soldier in the civil war, had done his duty there. He had worked, in behalf of the community, as well as for himself. His autobiography closes with a sentence worth remembering:

"I have tried to live an honest, moral and useful life, and never went back on a friend."

Were the principles expressed in this sentence made more generally the rule of living, the world would be far better than it is. The honest and moral life is the only one that may be a really useful life.

Never to have gone back on a friend must be regarded as a record to be admired. There are few perhaps, able to say truly that they have achieved a record so good. There are some mortals so constituted as not to be capable of genuine friendship. They are known as "fair weather friends." They assume an attitude of friendliness only for the gain there may be in it for themselves. They cater to the prosperous, and they hasten to desert the one in adversity.

For one to come to the end of the journey with the belief that he has tried to lead an honest, moral and useful life, doubtless is an indication that he has lived up to lofty ideals.

As debate on the four-power treaty progressed, two facts stood out clearly. The first was that the treaty would be upheld by the senate. The second was that members of the opposition were likely to receive all future favors from the yellow press rather than from grateful constituencies.

FENCING AND BOXING

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Some time ago there was a grand fencing bout in Europe. M. Gaudin, the champion of the French school of attack, contended with Signor Nadi, who was the champion of the Italian school.

Their pictures were published in the papers. A great crowd attended the performance. They made some little stir in the world.

And yet the stir was but little compared to that made by Carpenter and Dempsey, and by their predecessors, Jack Johnson, Jess Willard and others, in their time. Fencing will always be the sport of the few. Prize fighting is the passion of the many.

Swords can never be as interesting as fists. The reason is suggestive.

In two rounds which lasted forty-one minutes Gaudin and Nadi exchanged not less than thirty-one hits, almost every one of them fatal. And after each performance all that they produced was a little perspiration.

The points of their swords were concealed with a button so that they would not hurt each other. But we want to see somebody hurt. That is why we go to prize fights.

Ah, there is meat for strong men! There the public can see blood, real red blood stream from the nose. There we can have the pleasure of watching a finger, a rib, or a leg broken, and enjoy the rare spectacle of a man spitting out his teeth.

And at the last the spectators have the exquisite delight of watching the knockout and enjoying the picture of a gentleman dying for at least the space of ten counts.

In fencing they put on masks, they dull the point of the rapier. In fencing it takes five judges to decide whether one of the combatants has received the death stroke.

Bah! Fencing is only a game for civilized people. It is for that reason that it has no future.

We are barbarians. Our civilization is but a thin veneer and we get very tired of carrying it. You can see how naturally savage we are by observing children. All children love to destroy. There is a keen delight in breaking a window or hacking the piano, that is vastly more primitive and abiding than glass blowing or piano playing.

All children love bloody stories. They want to hear of heads chopped off and of little boys and girls being eaten up. The ogre in Jack the Giant-Killer and the wolf in Little Red Riding Hood are the permanent stars in childhood's imagination.

Grown-ups secretly enjoy the same sort of thing. If we cannot kill people ourselves we like to see them killed on the stage.

And we like to read about them in detective stories.

Digby Bell spoke for all of us when he said that he liked to have a story begin with murdering the banker in the first chapter and work from that on up.

And we like war. We even go about sagely declaring that war is human nature and people are crazy who think it can be stopped.

Patriotism seems to be about the only communal passion we can indulge in, and patriotism flags without its regular bucket of blood.

Always that form of recreation most re-creates us which reaches back farthest into the history of evolution and reproduces the most primal enthusiasms.

And prize fighting will always be more popular than fencing for the simple reason that men battered each other with fists long before they punctured each other with swords.

THE LISTENING POST

Once there was an eminently practical man. Whose constant question was: "What good is it?" Whenever a particular thing came up for discussion.

He was so eminently practical that his measure of things was in terms of bodily comfort and well being. As he interpreted them. Like the old woman in the Mother Goose tales.

Perhaps you remember her. She lived upon nothing but victuals and drink. They were the whole of her diet. She was one of the eminently practical people.

To the eminently practical man all things must have a practical application. Otherwise they had no value. He interpreted a forest in terms of lumber. The sea in terms of fishes.

A meadow was for him a place to grow clover. Clover is to feed cows. Cows are to give milk. Milk is to feed babies.

Babies are to grow up and be strong to work. Work is to achieve practical ends. And so the vision of the eminently practical man went about in a circle. From food to babies and from babies back to food again.

The stars were of no use to him. Of what use are the stars anyway? To the eminently practical mind. They do not give enough light to read by. An electric light over the reading chair is better than all the infinitude of stars in the heavens.

The stars are not edible. No food comes from them. Why worry about them?

Why study astronomy? What good could it do us if we knew a thousand times as much about stars as we do not.

And the moon. A little bit of the earth broken off. Giving a bit of reflected light. But something that could be dispensed with. Indeed, a green cheese moon might be better. Because we could eat it.

And so the eminently practical man rated everything at its practical value alone. Music, literature, painting, all of the arts he discarded.

"What good were they?" So the body of the eminently practical man grew.

And was strong. But the mind of the eminently practical man was wholly circumscribed. And the spirit of the eminently practical man shriveled up.

And he began to grow backward. Until he approximated the animal kingdom from which he may have come. His features grew coarse. His body was covered with shaggy hair. His teeth were long and sharp. And his eyes beady and cruel.

He had no finer sensibilities. Community interest was nothing to him. His mind did not grow upward and outward and onward. It grew inward and downward and selfward.

And he lived a great many years. And what became of him is uncertain. But if he continued his manner of living and thinking he may be in a palm tree somewhere. Shaking down cocoanuts.

SONGS OF THE POETS

Waterloo—By Aubrey De Vere (1788-1846)

Why have the Mighty lived—why have they died? Is it ever thus with idle wreck to strew Fields such as thine, remorseless Waterloo? Hopeless the lesson! Vainly hath ever cried Stern Fate to man—"So perish human pride!" Still must the Man combat for the Few: Still must the noblest blood fair earth bedew:

Tyrants, slaves, freemen, mouldering side by side! On such a day the World was lost, and won, By Pompey at Pharsalia: such a day Saw glorious Hannibal a fugitive: So faded 'neath the Macedonian Sun Persia's pale star: so empire passed away From Harold's brow—but He disdained to live!

LLOYD GEORGE'S POOR TRADE

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

What the Hohenzollerns attempted to do against the United States in 1917 through Mexico, Russian soviets are now striving to do against England in India through Afghanistan. Employing Mahdi, the capital of Afghanistan, as a base, these soviets are sending their sinister propagandists into India where conditions fomented by Gandhi furnish a fertile field for Russian intrigue against British authority.

Surely this activity of the bolshevik propagandists in India must be an unpleasant reminder to Lloyd George of a certain memorable trade agreement he made with the bolsheviks. One of the conditions of this agreement was that the Reds

ALWAYS READ A TREATY

(Boston Herald)

The senator from Missouri, now well remembered in Boston as the attorney for our former district attorney, and soon to be heard from, we understand, in comment on what he says is an entirely unjustified decision of the supreme court of Massachusetts, took part on Wednesday in this suggestive colloquy in the debate on the four-power treaty in the senate:

Senator Reed—The Anglo-Japanese alliance is not abrogated by this treaty. It does not appear in this treaty. It should be plainly stated in this instrument that the Anglo-Japanese alliance is abrogated and this treaty substituted for it.

Senator Lenroot then read article IV of the treaty, as follows: "And thereupon the agreement between Great Britain and Japan, which was concluded at London on July 19, 1911, shall terminate."

Senator Reed—That is correct. I overlooked it.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

Somebody notes the fact that the birthday anniversary of Grover Cleveland has passed without public demonstration. To this circumstance he bases a significance by no means deserved. There are but two presidents whose natal anniversaries are observed. These are the two that doubtless are accorded credit for more elements of greatness than possessed by any of the others.

It would be unfortunate if custom required special attention to the anniversary of all presidents, or to all great ones. Many presidents, worthy and devoted men, have not been in any sense great, apart from the dignity pertaining to their station. Some have been commonplace, some actually weak, elevated through accident. In touching the subject, the writer quoted above, includes Jefferson with Washington and Lincoln, excluding Roosevelt. He is welcome to his judgment, even though the judgment be defective. His allegation that Roosevelt "will slip from memory" rests not on fact, but upon prejudice.

Jefferson was a great democrat. To the present generation he is a name only. He tried to get into the constitution more democracy than is to be discerned there. He was able in defense of his principles, but not remarkably successful in putting the principles across.

Why celebrate birthdays even of the great? The greatest mortal that ever drew breath does not merit applause for having been born.

There is predicted the coming of a day when a man will fly from New York to Los Angeles in his own machine, bringing his whole family. He is to make the journey by starting after breakfast and arriving by dinner time. His expense for the trip will be five dollars. Dream on!

Of course flying will be greatly improved. The prediction quoted is mild compared with some. Hopeful souls have planned to fly to the moon. The experience would be interesting, particularly were they to fly back of the orb and map the hither side of it.

California welcomed Herbert Hoover with a warmth that must have been gratifying to him. This state knows a good man when it sees him, and is glad to have him in its midst.

Hoover is himself a Californian. Perhaps sometime circumstances may permit him to enjoy more often the high privilege of citizenship in this commonwealth.

"If we can make people sanitary by law, why can't we make them moral?" asks a reformer.

Largely, perhaps, because people are not built that way. Legislation to make water run uphill would be quite futile.

The finding of bombs in Sinn Fein headquarters at Belfast does not on the face of it seem to augur peace.

However, it may be that the bombs had been captured from the enemy and stored for safety.

A correspondent rebukes reporters because when writing of persons charged with crime "their pens are dipped in acid." It is difficult to see where she gets such impression. When a person is charged with crime, the reportorial course is likely to be exactly opposite to that of which they are accused by the correspondent. They elevate the prisoner to the plane of the heroic or the spiritually beautiful. If the prisoner is a woman, whose garb is fetching and whose eyes are limpid and appealing, goodly fact, is enter fantasy. She is so pictured that the prosecutor who seeks to establish her guilt, after investigation has assured him that she is guilty, has to take the role of brutality assailing the helpless.

Doubtless reporters have faults. From the particular one ascribed to them by the tender-hearted correspondent, they are lamentably free.

When the President puts in a happy day knocking a golf ball about the sward endeavoring to make it roll into one of the holes made and provided, there is cheer in the spectacle.

People who think the country is going to smash ought to listen to the swish and swat of the executive club, and learn to smile again.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

This is the first lesson in my Personally Conducted Correspondence School for Courtesy. I'm going to try to hammer in to whoever will read these lines that by slightly pulling at the small muscles at either end of the mouth and by emitting sounds that have sunshine in them instead of glare ice a lot of money may be made. I'm not putting it on any higher grounds. I'm not arguing that any of us had rather talk with a good natured man than with a sour-ball. I'm just saying that it pays to be white.

"I'm not going back to that store any more to buy your darned old bran biscuits," my wife said this morning.

So I conducted an investigation. I found that the store is classed as the best in our small community. It carries the best grades of the best goods. You can get anything you may happen to want in the line of groceries there. You may also get a competent hawling out from an old clerk who spends most of his time in bawling out customers.

"I want the loose biscuits," my wife had said. "The biscuits which come in a box are more expensive."

"We have never carried the loose biscuits," said the old clerk.

"But I've bought them here scores of times," said Mrs. P.

"I tell you," said the old clerk, leaning on his knuckles and barking, "that we have never carried the loose biscuits."

So he had his way. He did not make a sale and he drove away a customer. The funny part is that all the clerks in this store are old and have been with the store for hundreds of years, and that they are all driving away customers. One by one the old standbys who have made a fortune for the store's proprietor are leaving in favor of other establishments where the clerks are not quite so savage. The modern idea is that a clerk who has to be kept on a leash is practically useless around a store.

I'm going to amend the scheme of this little yarn. This isn't an effort to prove that politeness pays. That isn't necessary, really. Every one knows it. The true moral of this anecdote, perhaps, is that just because you have raised a full set of gray whiskers and an interesting family you have not been given a blank permit to be mean.

I'm unable to see—and I know that a lot of people are going to be unkind about this—that a grouchy old man is any more entitled to exemption than a grouchy young one. Merely having advanced in years is not a claim to merit. Lord bless you, you can't help growing old unless you die. An old fool is just as much of a fool as a young one is.

Come to think of it, we should demand more from the aged in courtesy and kindness and comprehension than we do of youngsters. They should know more about how to be courteous.

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

Utilizing compressed air and a new form of sound board, a British invention has brought out a phonograph that is said to equal in intensity the volume of sound of a full band.

There are very few acts that are re-engaged at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre in Los Angeles. The Griffin Twins are said to hold the record for appearances at this theatre for they have played at this theatre eleven different weeks.

"Why do girls leave home?"—this is a question that is answered in the photoplay "Why Girls Leave Home," in which beautiful Anna Q. Nilsson is starred.

TINY BURGLARS.

BERLIN, March 24.—Head of a most successful gang of little burglars at the age of 13 is a record which little Willy Schneider holds. Aged from 8 to 13 years, the tiny tots are able to boast of a success many veteran burglars may well be jealous of. Willy kept his gang well organized and severe punishment met those who did not obey orders. While two of his "men" were always "on watch," the rest were kept busy pocket picking and breaking into houses.

FEED BIRDS.

APPLETON, Wis., March 24.—Birch trees in large numbers are being felled in northern Wisconsin by Fish and Game Protective associations in an effort to provide feed for starving birds. As the result of the recent sleet and snow storm, the birds have been unable to scratch through the hard crust of snow to get food and as the result many of them have starved to death. Considerable relief was given the birds by cutting down birch trees and knocking the ice off the branches so that the leaf buds are exposed.

Dr. Prince believes that the mysterious depredations have been caused by human agencies, he declares. From left to right you see Alexander McDonald, farmer, who says the "ghost" ran him from his home; Dr. Prince, A. Chisholm, Messrs. MacRitchie and Whiddan and Mary Ellen McDonald. CLASSIFICATION OF BOOKS IN LIBRARY IS UNDER WAY

Mrs. Danford Announces Commencement of Work

Mrs. Danford, city librarian, announces that she and her assistants are now at work preparing classified lists of books in the library. There will be, for instance, a list of volumes dealing with vocational themes likely to be of interest to professional men and women, lists of theological works, of books on agriculture, horticulture and nature study in general.

Among the interesting new books of reference which the average book buyer cannot afford to own, the library has recently acquired the book by Mrs. Candace Wheeler, founder of the Decorative Art Society of America, on "The Development of Embroidery in America." It is one of a series of volumes on arts and crafts which is being published by the Harper company.

Another friend on the shelves who will be welcomed is Vilhjalmur Stefansson's "Friendly Arctic." Mr. Stefansson lectured in Glendale last year in the Chautauqua course and gave us an entirely new view of the Arctic region. This book elaborates what he told us at that time about the taming of life in the north, which we had supposed to be a land of desolation.

Another new book for which there will probably be a wild scramble is entitled "Easy Lessons in Einstein," which is elucidated as "a discussion of the more intelligible features of the theory of relativity," by Edwin E. Slosson.

"The Play Way," by H. Caldwell Cook, should be of much interest to mother in the Parent-Teacher associations and the reading circle. It was written by a teacher of English in the Perse school of Cambridge and is recommended as an important contribution to educational thought. It describes a school in which the pupils conduct their own lessons. Students of drama will be glad to know that the library has purchased "Beyond the Horizon," by Eugene O'Neill. This is the play which was awarded the Pulitzer prize of $1000 by Columbia university as the best American drama of the year. Alexander Woolcott of the New York Times describes it as having the mood and austerity of a Thomas Hardy novel. The New York World calls it a real event in the intellectual theater.

For readers who want thrillers there is a new detective story, "The Yellow Claw," by Sax Rohmer, a tale of mystery calculated to whet jaded appetites.

Charmian London's appreciation rather than biography, of her famous husband, Jack London, will be a find for many who cannot afford a work so expensive, the two volumes selling for $10.

Another sidelight of Theodore Roosevelt, best loved of modern big Americans, will be discovered in "Roosevelt, the Happy Warrior," written by his Harvard classmate and friend, Bradley Gilman. It gives many characteristic anecdotes of the great man.

"Seeing the Far West," by John T. Faris, may well be added to bedside libraries of travel, furnishing as it does a wonderful panorama in text and illustration of the glories of western states from the Rockies to the Pacific. It will delight those who have been unable to travel and those who wish to refresh their recollections. It is a companion to "Seeing the Sunny South," by the same author.

"Westward Hoboes" by Winifred Hawkrigge, is another book of travel which tempts perusal and amuses as well as instructs.

Women-haters not infrequently are floorwalkers in department stores.

MUSIC MEMORY CONTEST PRIZE AWARDS

To Be Made at Meeting of Glendale Music Club April 7

Relative to the music memory contest and the concert Saturday morning at 10 a. m. at the T. D. and L. theatre at which competitors will register their guesses as to the 12 selections played and their composers, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones reports that prizes will not be announced until several days following the concert.

The awards will be made at the next meeting of the Glendale Music club April 7. The full number and amount of the prizes cannot be determined until a report has been turned in by Postmaster D. Ripley Jackson, who is the chairman of the prize committee.

Mrs. H. E. Bartlett heads the list of the committee appointed to select judges. Mrs. Dora Gibson, who has had general charge of the contest and Mrs. Mattison B. Jones are anxious it should be thoroughly understood that this contest is open to all except professional musicians and there will be prizes for adults as well as children.

Also, the correct naming of ten of the twelve compositions to be played and their composers, will be sufficient to win a prize though there will of course be no bar to a full list. The capitalization and spelling of compositions and composers will be taken into account by the judges.

All contestants are asked to be in their seats at the T. D. and L. Saturday morning by 9:30 and to come equipped with two pencils, an eraser, and paper.

Judges of the contest are Mrs. Charles A. Parker, Mrs. Lillian E. Dow, Mrs. Robert Philip, Mrs. E. W. Kinney, Mrs. Eva J. Cunningham, Miss Monell, Miss Isgriz, Mrs. Eugene Murman, Mrs. Lillian Suits, Mrs. C. L. Peckham, Mrs. L. N. Haged, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, chairman.

Ushers from Junior Music club: James Smith, Lucille Allen, Margaret West, Gertrude Heide-man, Ethel Burke, Doris Moyse, Freda Potts, Winifred Parker, Veda Knapp, Leonora Rose, Lloyd Knapp, Lawrence Knapp, Marcella Webb and Margaret Brown.

AUSTRALIA BIDS IN CHEAP LABOR

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Australia is experiencing hard times purely because of her immense reservoir of undeveloped wealth, according to Louis C. Stewart, Pacific coast lumber king, who recently returned from a business survey of the Kangaroo continent.

"Hard times in Australia are due almost entirely to a labor shortage, and the consequent labor situation," declared Stewart.

"What Australia needs is a flood of industrial immigration which can give the country the industrial development and the exploitation of the immense natural resources which it needs.

"At present the Australian government is too narrow in its viewpoint. It is dominated by the local labor movement, which is interested in stemming the labor tide, to its own advantage. This keeps labor prices up.

"Australia is a wonderful country, and it is impossible to exaggerate the possibilities of trade between the United States and Australia as soon as things come back to normal.

"Australia, however, has simply got to get a large and industrious population before it can look for industrial prosperity, and before the United States can look for solid and steady trade.

JAMES W. FOLEY

When my Aunt Nellie comes to see
Us and don't come to sew,
But talks just awful fast 'cause she Can't stay, she has to go.
Almost before I get a chance
To hear a thing that's said,
My Ma just gives the clock a glance
And says: "Come John! To bed!"

Aunt Nellie, she knows lots of things
And she has lots of views,
Whenever she has time she brings
My Ma a lot of news
And she says: "Land sakes, did you hear?"
And Ma says: "Do tell—do!"
And then she sees me and says: "Come, dear,
It's past bed time for you."

Sometimes Aunt Nellie starts to tell
Some gossip that she hears,
And Ma says: "Sh! Be careful, Nell!
Small pitchers have large ears!"
And right away I know she'll say:
"Come, John! I think you've read
Enough tonight—be on your way,
It's time you were in bed."

It's not past my bed time at all,
For it is hardly eight,
But when Aunt Nellie comes to call
Ma says: "Come, dear, it's late!"
And I can hear the buzz downstairs,
But I can't hear what's said,
Except when Ma says: "Say your prayers,
That's right dear—go to bed!"

The Meek Inherit

By JOHN BRECK

Dusk is the time to prowl, especially if one has a romantic spot to prowl in. Then the charitable shades hide everything one does not choose to see and cast a veil of mystery over what one is seeking. They mask the ravages of time and earthquake on the desert mansion whose rampant gardens are my hunting ground until I expect to see lights leap up behind its hundred windows, hear the murmur of voices echo the whisper of jeweled spray from the great stone fountains.

But come half an hour too soon, and I have no illusions of the gaiety forty years have silenced. The massive chimney, crumbled, gives the facade a noseless look; the shattering panes where the conservatory bowed out beneath its gaunt like the grin of a skull. It has not even the air of being comforted; its ghosts are all dead together; none of their line, that they might feel the need of visiting, remains. I reflect sardonically that the lavish spirits who left their only memory in this form would hardly be interested in a real estate corporation. And yet—

I hear an eerie sound, silenced, repeated. After the first start of bewilderment I know it for the flutter of a bird's wing. In the old aviary, a 12-foot bird cage of wickered bronze, a gray ghost flits where a bird of song once sang. Golden canaries used to sing. Mute it is, but its desperate efforts to break its prison bespeak the vitality of the wild blood in its veins. And now I see where it entered the open door by which the sleeping perches were cleaned and flew out again by that other exit, the only one the caged birds knew.

I cannot save it. Even if I could pry those staunch bars apart, it would not come to my opening. Even if I could get in where it flies, I could not bring it down to that narrow portal of freedom.

The free wings outside sweep low as the dusk deepens, seeking cover in the holly, in the evergreens; the hedge is full of them. I see the quiet step softly over the scattered marble, its carvings filled with moss, and settle into the leaf-strewn bed of the fountain. And a wood-rat creeps into the cast-iron shell of a fallen lion.

Then the self-same power which made him seek the light at dawn does what I could not—lures my poor "bush-chippy" to hunt the peaceful dark. He finds the narrow archway. Once he is perched I close it behind him. The grating noise jerks up the attentive ears of a jack-rabbit. And I fall to musing how the self-same creature man dispossessed, without a protest, are in possession; the meek are again inheriting.

LIVING WAGES IN PRISON IS MRS. BOOTH'S AIM

Stirs Interest in Families of Prisoners by Penitentiary Visit

In a tour of California in behalf of prison welfare, Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, wife of Gen. Ballington Booth and head of the Volunteer Prison League of America, has created widespread interest in the treatment of prisoners in jails and penitentiaries and the welfare of their families, thousands of whom are said to be without funds and even destitute. Church people and welfare workers of California have been cooperating with the prison league movement in this and other states. It is said, in an effort to effect legislation that will enable the prisoners of the country to earn an amount sufficient to support their families until their discharge or release on probation.

Mrs. Booth's public appearances have been made recently in Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Diego, Santa Barbara and San Francisco and at both San Quentin and Folsom prisons where she spoke before thousands of "her boys." In addition, she has held many private conferences that are expected to produce results in behalf of prison welfare.

Known affectionately among convicts of the United States as the "little mother of the prisons," Mrs. Booth is said to have had a more intimate touch with prison life and conditions in this country than any other living woman. For the past 25 years her entire life has been devoted to prison reform and during that time she has been instrumental in the abolition of prison stripes, the lock-step and the silent system of punishment.

"By doing away with the prison stripes, the lock-step and the dead system of silent punishment, we have brought a new ray of hope into the lives of thousands of men who have erred," said Mrs. Booth. "Upon their discharge from prison we are making them over again into self-respecting citizens, capable of supporting their families and of succeeding in a business way. What we still need is a system endorsed by public sentiment that will make it possible for these men to earn living wages in prison so that they may contribute to the support of their otherwise destitute families."

Y. W. C. A. TO DISCUSS PROBLEMS

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 24. (United Press)—Problems of women as they affect their sex in every relation—personal, social, family and international—will consume a large part of the program of the Young Women's Christian Association of America, at their seventh national biennial convention here April 20-27.

In addition to the regular business of the convention there will also be a series of addresses on "Internationalism."

Mrs. Frederick Mackey Paist of Philadelphia, president, will preside. The address of welcome will be made by Mrs. M. G. Thompson, president of the Hot Springs Young Women's Christian Association, followed by greetings from the fraternal delegates.

Mrs. Robert E. Spry of New York, president of the national board, will give a report of the work done by the national board for the past two years. "Facing the Present," a consideration of the place of the Young Women's Christian Association in "Modern Community Life," is the subject of the address to be given by Miss Mabel T. Cratty, the general secretary of the national board.

A. Maude Royden, England's noted woman preacher, suffrage leader, author and scholar, is coming to America to give a series of addresses before the convention.

Charlotte Niven of London, general secretary of the world's committee, will introduce a resolution for world peace and a better understanding between nations on international questions and relationships. Speakers include: Miss Anne Lamb, an Anglo-Indian, from Calcutta; Countess Helene Goblet d'Alviella of Brussels, Belgium; Judge Florence E. Allen of Cleveland, Ohio; Bishop Robert E. Jones of New Orleans, and Mrs. Luke G. Johnson of Atlanta, and Professor Eduard C. Lindeman of Greensboro, N. C.

PRINCE SHINES 'EM AT NICE

NICE (By Mail to United Press)—"All right, shine 'em up, Sambo, and make it snappy!"

Any American visitor is apt to address a negro servant at the Hotel Ruhl. The guests will not know that the porter is Prince Ibrahim Wachala Nengami, only living heir to the throne of Kanour, in deepest Africa, and one who has been received as royally by the kaiser and the crown prince, the Empress Eugenie, the prince of Belgium and the pope.

The prince, whose country was divided between France, Germany and England, is technically a protégé of France. He lost his small allowance from the government at Baccarat, and was compelled to take his present job shining shoes.

When a woman can speak three languages fluently she is foolish to throw herself away on a man who understands but one.

Hope makes hopeless fools of some people.

'HILLHAVEN' IS NEW TUJUNGA COLONY

Writers and Lecturers to Find Retreat in the Verdugo Hills

TUJUNGA, March 24.—Dr. W. Frederick Keeler of the Higher Thought college is to open sales tomorrow of 600 lots in Verdugo Hillhaven. This is the new name of the Talamantes ranch subdivision in Tuna canyon, which is to be developed as a retreat for writers, lecturers and students of the higher thought.

It is believed that this is one of the most ideal spots to be found anywhere in the country for such a community, as it combines both beauty and seclusion. Dr. Keeler has plans in formation which, when carried out, will make this particular part of the Verdugo hills most charming and attractive.

An amphitheater and swimming lake will be constructed around a sycamore grove and spring of water which are on the tract. A system of roads is to be constructed and a Greek temple built. In an effort to create a proper atmosphere certain restrictions will be placed on the land, especially against the keeping of livestock.

Peace, Contentment and other principles of the Higher Thought faith are to be the names of roads in the tract.

A farewell reception for the Misses Alice and Helen Kelly will be given tonight at the home of Miss May Manley on North Pine street. Both of the young ladies will leave next Tuesday for a tour of the southern and eastern states, after which Miss Helen Kelly will return to her home in Chicago. The engagement of Alice Kelly to Ernest Anthony was recently announced.

Five newly married couples are to be given a reception by Post 250, American Legion, tomorrow night at Bolton hall. The new husbands are all members of the local post. The honorees at the reception are to be Mr. and Mrs. Fred Good, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Felhaber and Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Hill.

Community church members have been making a house-to-house canvass of Tujunga this week, gathering material for a church census. Copies of the local church paper, The Clarion, were distributed at the same time.

A cooked food sale will be held tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. by the ladies of the American Legion auxiliary. Hot coffee will be served at noon.

"DR. JIM" IS SEA TALE AT GLENDALE

The salt air of the sea blows through the universal story of "Dr. Jim," the Universal special attraction starring Frank Mayo, which opens tonight at the Glendale theatre. From waxed floors that are trod by the "four hundred" to the slippery decks of a 4-master in the waters of tropic seas, the action of a strong drama of marriage, written for Mr. Mayo by Stuart Paton, takes its course.

"Dr. Jim" is an eminent surgeon with a penchant for heeding the pleas of tiny sick children before thinking of his wife's claims upon him. When he neglects her, she becomes dissatisfied, and, in imagination, is forlorn and neglected.

A breakdown sends the doctor to the southern seas and his wife accompanies him. On the ship they have chartered is a crew of rough characters captained by a man without soul or mercy. This skipper is handsome enough, however, in the light of a yellow moon—and the husband's illness makes the emphasis of this romantic quality a simple matter.

Frank Mayo has done good work before, but this performance is above anything he has ever offered. Opposite him Claire Windsor is winsome and quite natural as the wife, while Herbert Hayes holds the attention in his scenes as the despicable skipper.

Stanhope Wheatcroft creates a laugh in a clever portrayal of a butterfly of the most insipid variety. Gordon Sackville, Robert Anderson and Oliver Cross each present commanding figures in lesser roles. William Worthington is responsible for the direction.

TRADE IN SEA SHELLS
Great Britain carries on a considerable traffic in sea shells. Total imports of shells into the United Kingdom in 1919 was close to $3,000,000.
